PREFACE

Considerable interest was expressed at the reunion of 1939 for the revision of the Anderson-Denny History which would bring the family record up to date for the descendants of James Mason Anderson "Tyger Jim" and his wife Mary "Polly" Miller. Some work was done at that time and certain materials were collected during the years that followed.

Years were passing, families were continuing to scatter and the task of publishing another family volume was becoming more difficult. At the reunion of 1954, the descendants of "Tyger Jim" Anderson resolved to proceed immediately with the publication of a new history for this branch of the Anderson family. The group further agreed to underwrite the cost and a chairman was elected with instructions to advance the publication of the new book as much as possible. Financial arrangements had been made so that no funds needed to be solicited until the time of publication and release.

Through the efforts of representatives from the various lines, this material has been accumulated and arranged to provide a complete record of each individual descended from "Tyger Jim" and "Polly" Miller Anderson. Use has been made of all facts and items of interest which have been received. In addition more than 145 identifying pictures of elder bloodline family members and of places with historic backgrounds have been inserted with the record of that family to make this new volume more interesting and worthwhile.

Liberal use has been made of materials contained in Anderson-Denny which records the previous research to identify the Andersons and the Dennys prior to the settlement of William Anderson in South Carolina. Many of the facts can be found nowhere else and they are of infinite value to this family. The history of Nazareth Presbyterian Church has been inserted since it played such an important part in the lives of the early Andersons. Record has also been made of the family burying grounds and available pictures of family reunions have been included for the benefit of present and future generations.

The history would not be complete without giving some idea as to the conditions which prevailed in what is now Spartanburg County, South Carolina at the time William Anderson and his family settled there. Liberal use has been made of the material contained in a new history of that county published in 1940 under the direction of the Works Progress Administration in cooperation with the Association of University Women. Authentic sketches have been included with this "setting" material to picture items of interest referred to.

Not only has there been set forth the record for the descendants of "Tyger Jim" Anderson, but sufficient use has been made of information contained in Anderson-Denny to connect these descendants with each of the other lines proceeding from William Anderson, grandfather of "Tyger Jim". Details in these other lines have been omitted, however, it remains no difficult task for anyone to connect himself with a descendant of any of those lines using the associated material that has been included.

It is indeed gratifying that the time has come for the release of this new and comprehensive history of the Anderson family. Thanks go out to the many representatives who have contributed material untiringly, thus insuring the success of this publication.

Every means has been used to avoid error, however, if there be any errors noted, the author should be informed, and accordingly messages of correction will be transmitted to holders of the new book.

ANDERSON REUNIONS

Through the years there have been many family reunions of the Andersons. Unrecorded gatherings of a smaller nature have been held at various homesteads and neighborhood churches. The first picture available of a major family reunion was made at "Holly Hill", home of Franklin Leland Anderson, son of "Tyger Jim", which reunion took place in 1896. Between 60 and 70 people attended this gathering

Another reunion appears to have been held at Old Antioch Church, near Cashville, S. C. in 1906. This group resolved itself into the Anderson Memorial Association. Those present furthered the work of Mrs. Margaret Anderson Boyd toward assembling information for the publication of the Anderson-Denny History released in 1914.

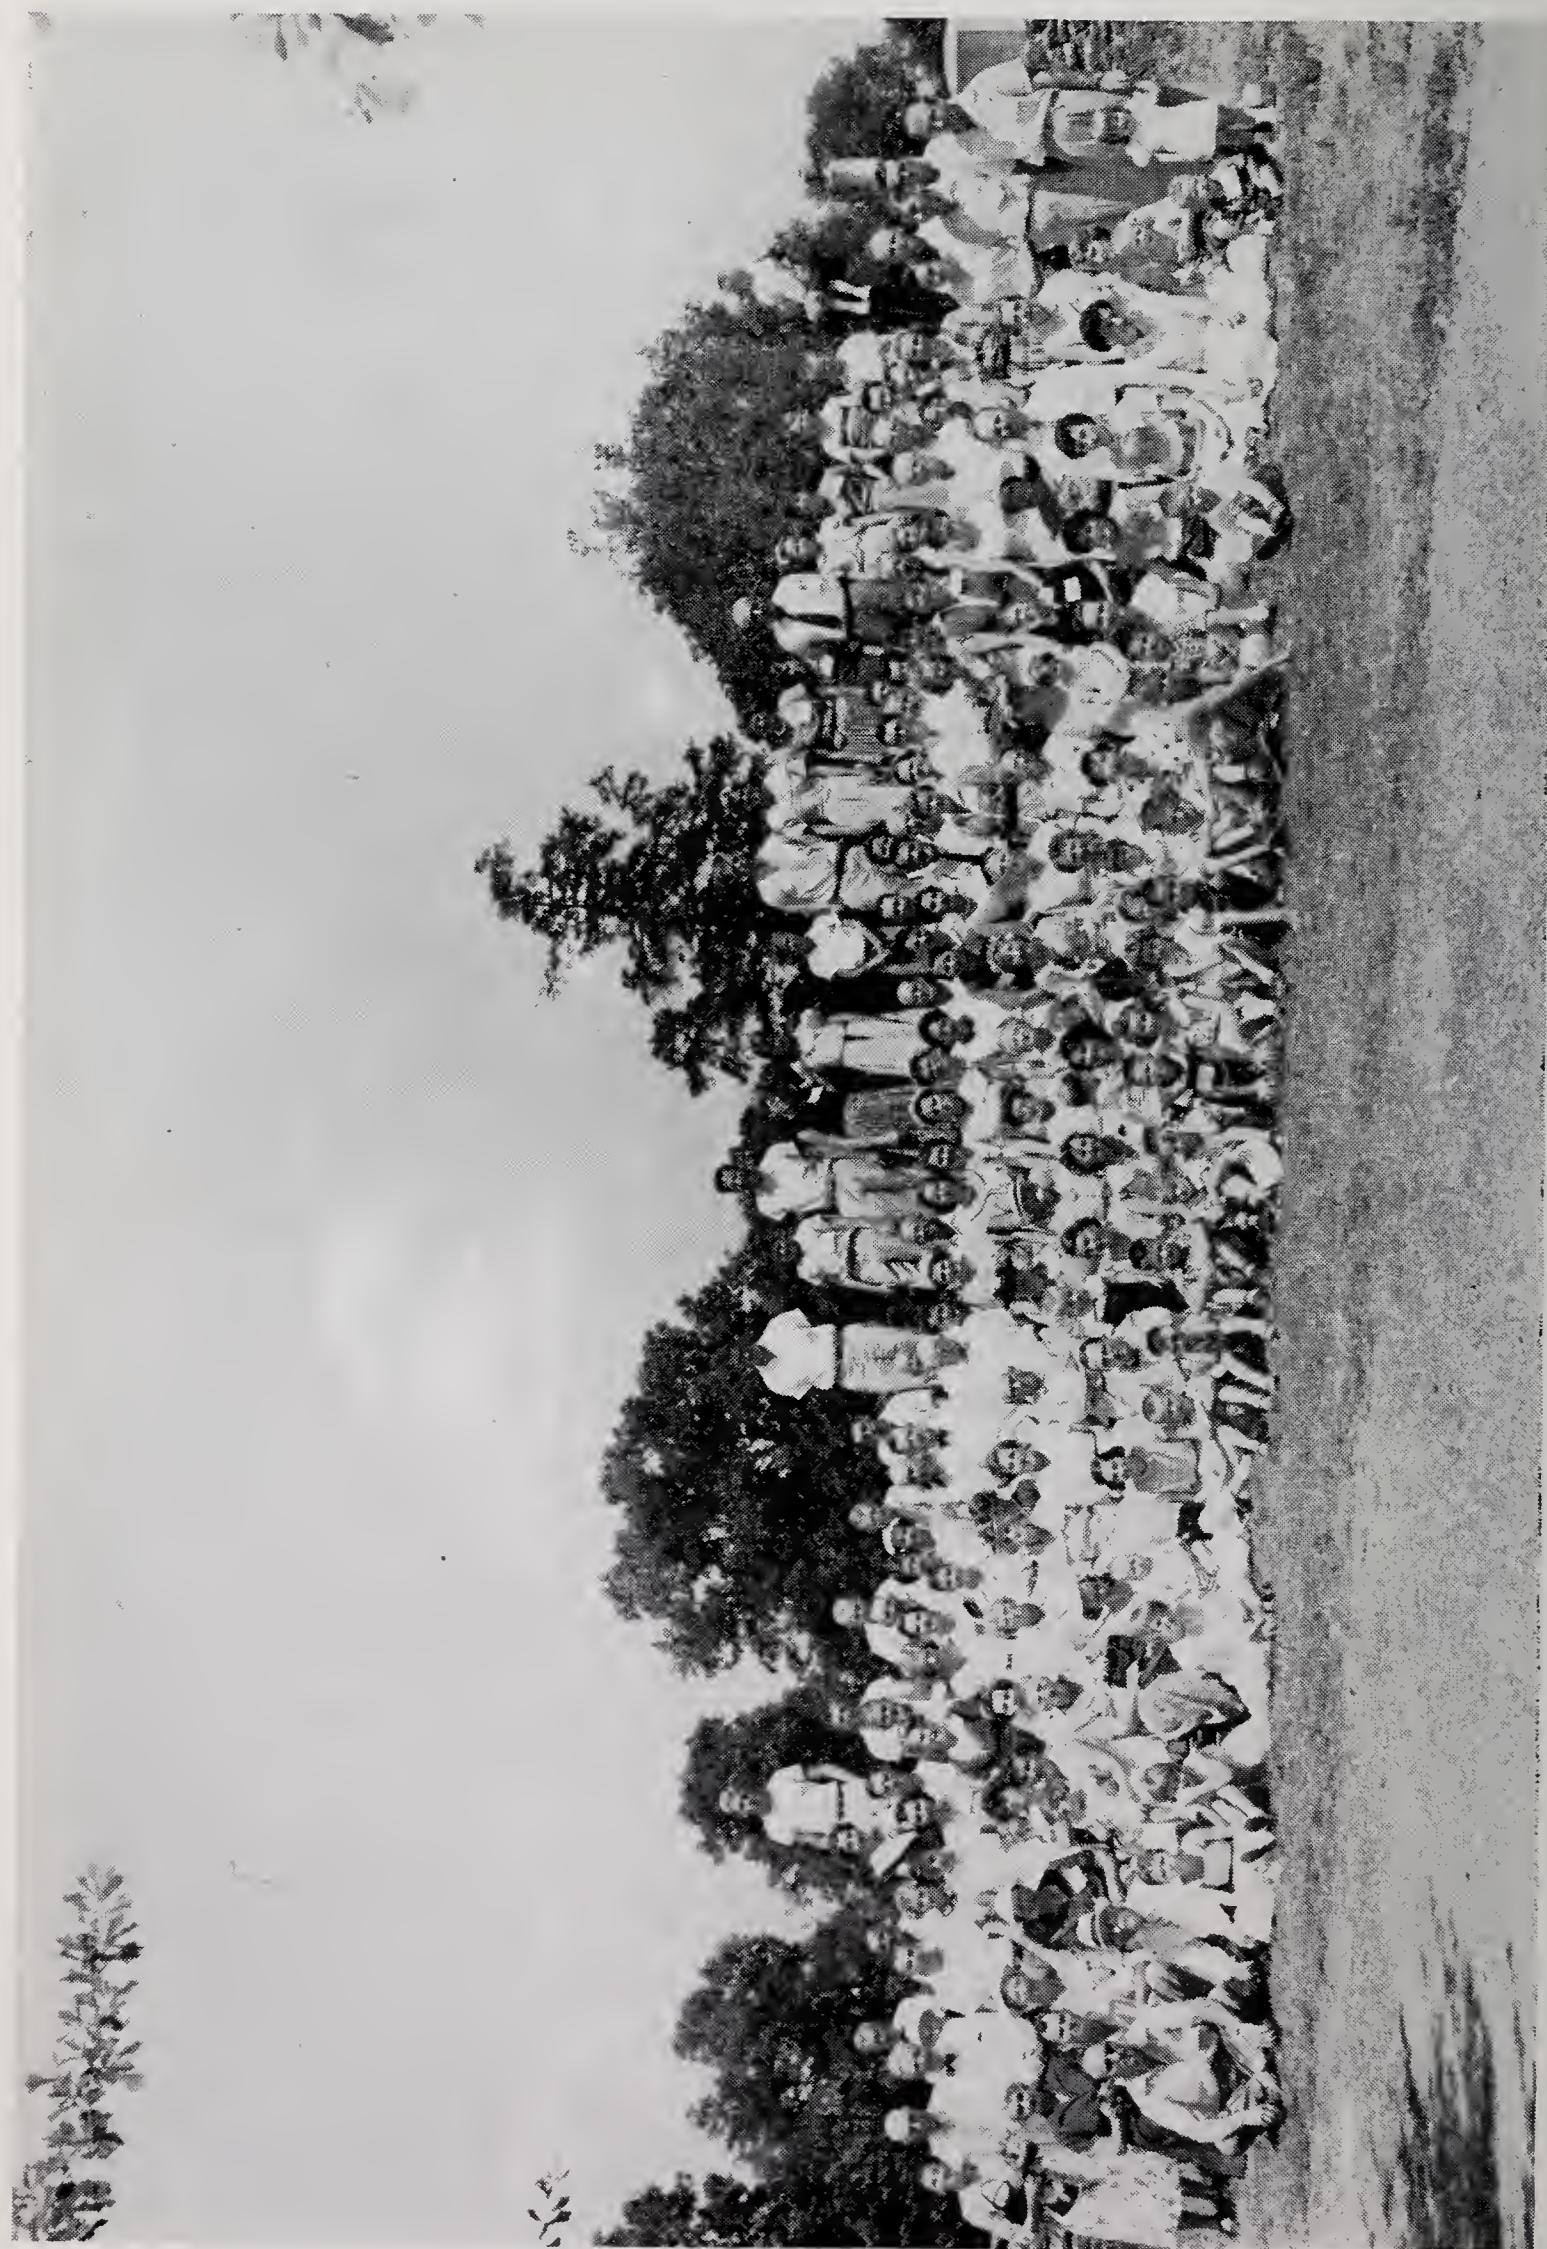

There was also another reunion in 1908 as a picture of Mrs. Boyd is shown in the Anderson-Denny History "at the reunion in 1908". Reference is further made in one of the research letters, apparently written after that date, in which Mrs. A. H. Watts expressed the desire for a "pleasant" reunion. This was probably near the time for publication of Anderson-Denny.

The next general reunion appears to have been held at Nazareth Presbyterian Church on August 26, 1939. This group gathered as descendants of James Mason Anderson "Tyger Jim" and his wife Mary "Polly" Miller. Some 125 members of the family were present with the oldest attendant being Emma Harriet Anderson (Dunovant) from Edgefield, S. C. aged 72 years. Picture of this group appears on the page that follows.

Fifteen years passed before there was another general reunion of the descendants of James Mason Anderson. This reunion in 1954 was also held at Nazareth Presbyterian Church at which time the group decided to proceed with the publication of this volume. Consideration was also given at that time to the matter of holding reunions in the future. It was agreed then to hold them five years apart from this point on, with the next one to come on the third Saturday in August, 1959. Nazareth Presbyterian Church was also named as the permanent location for the holding of these future reunions. Shown on the pages that follow are pictures which were taken at this gathering, one being of the entire group of some 175 persons and the others representing candid shots which were made during the picnic lunch on the grounds. The oldest attendant at this reunion was Maria Worthington Anderson (Gilreath) of near Greer, S. C. aged 86 years. Mrs. Gilreath died less than six months later.

CHAMBERSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA

Exterior

About two miles from Chambersburg, Pa. there is located the Rockey Springs Presbyterian Church. The present building was erected in 1794, however, the church was founded in 1734. It may be noted that the pastor, Rev. John Craighead, led every man in the congregation in the war of the American Revolution.

It is evident that wherever a group of Scotch-Irish Presbyterians established themselves they built a church or "Meeting House". The above views of the interior and exterior of this historic church in Pennsylvania show the construction to be very much like the Nazareth Presbyterian Church in South Carolina. Records show that the families which composed the Upper and Lower settlements in what is now Spartanburg County, S. C. were for the most part from the Pennsylvania settlements established shortly after these colonists reached the New World. It may be noted that the South Carolina settlers from Pennsylvania had much the same ideas as to church construction as they did at the time Rockey Springs church was built. It is noted that the Rockey Springs church building was erected thirty-eight years before the present building at Nazareth.

NAZARETH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

No more suitable account can be found than that in the Anderson-Denny History outlining the background of historic Nazareth Presbyterian Church which stands today as a symbol of Presbyterianism in Upper South Carolina. In the lines which follow will be found a complete outline of what this church has meant throughout the years, this account being taken from the original Anderson-Denny History published in 1914.

"In 1761, eight or ten families of Scotch-Irish, from Pennsylvania, settled upon branches of the Tyger River, then in Spartanburg District. Settlements certainly existed before the year 1765, for in that year the road that passes by the church between the North and Middle Tyger rivers was opened. Some of the families were in Pennsylvania as early as 1746, for in that year Captain Andrew Barry was born in that State. He died in 1811, aged 65 years. The names of the first settlers were Barry, Moore, Anderson, Collins, Thompson, Vernon, Pearson, Jamison, Dodd, Ray, Penny, McMahon Nicholls and Miller. About the year 1767 or 1768 their numbers were increased by a colony which came direct from the North of Ireland, County Antrim, through Charleston, S. C. They were each entitled to one hundred acres of land by a grant from his majesty, George II, and the old titles bear date of 1768. The first colony settled upon the Tyger Rivers, the second upon the highlands adjoining. It consisted of the families of Coan, Snoddy, Peden, Alexander, Gaston, Morton and perhaps others. When finally settled the two colonies covered a territory nearly twenty miles square. Dr. George Howe, D.D., LL.D., in his 'History of the Presbyterian Church in South Carolina', says that 'these first settlers were full of reverence for God's word and for the institutions of religion; and no sooner had they established their homes in the forest of the New World than they made the best arrangements in their power for the public worship of the God of their fathers'.

"Occasional visits of evangelists, sent out chiefly by the Synods of New York and Philadelphia, led to the selection of a place for a church. This place was chosen as the site of their sanctuary, because it was equidistant between what was then known as the upper and lower settlements. They were so careful to have it as near the center as possible that two of the old men stepped the distance'. Thus the present church grounds are midway between the railroad towns of Moore and Wellford. The first house was built in 1765, the material being hewn logs from the surrounding forest. It was in the lower part of the present graveyard, to be near the spring, perhaps. They applied to the Presbytery of the Carolinas for preaching in 1766. Between 1785 and 1790 the log house was displaced by a larger, more expensive frame building.

"The church was organized in the spring of 1772, by Joseph Alexander, D.D., of Bullock's Creek, York District. The road that passes below the church to Pinckneyville, the oldest public road in the county, was first opened as a bridle path for Dr. Alexander to travel when he came to discharge his ministerial duties. All who claimed to be members of the Presbyterian church before removal, were enrolled without examination; except those who were so unfortunate as to have 'evil reports following'. Such were required to wait until their cases could be investigated. So great was the reverence of the congregation for the office of ruling elder, they thought there was scarcely one among them fit to discharge its duties, and they had great difficulty in making a selection. The officiating minister, who organized the church, overruled their scruples: 'If yere canna get hewn stone, yere must take donna', i. e., rough ones. A new difficulty then arose. The candidates-elect had such exalted views of the character and qualifications requisite for the office, that they refused for some time to be ordained.

"The first elders elected were Capt. Andrew Barry, Mr. Robert Nesbit, Mr. John Muckelwrath, and Mr. Thomas Peden. The following list of names contains all their successors up to 1872:

Richard Barry, Sen.	Richard Barry
James Hadden	Thomas B. Collins
Thomas Bryce	Jonathan Hadden
Alexander Evins	Denny Anderson
Colonel John Means	M. P. Wakefield
Thomas Gaston	James Vernon, M.D.
Andrew Coan	Colonel S. N. Evins
Richard Daniel	Michael Smith
John Smith	David M. Bryce
Andrew Barry	J. C. Caldwell

"The session records of the first sixty years were consumed by fire in the dwelling of the clerk.

"Deacons were first chosen in obedience to an injunction of the General Assembly in 1840. Previous to this time the congregation managed her finances through trustees. The first deacons were:

John Fielder	James A. Miller
J. K. Means	J. P. Miller, M.D.

"The stated supplies of the congregation are first, Rev. Joseph Alexander before, through and after the Revolutionary War. During his ministration the congregation suffered much from Tories and Indians'. Many lives were lost, among the number being William Anderson. He was murdered in his bed at night. At the same time the home of his son, Major David Anderson, was burned.

"Rev. James Templeton served the church from 1794 to 1802; Mr. Means, a licentiate—never ordained—a short time, about 1816; Rev. John Boggs, four years; and Edward Tonge Buist, D.D., ten years. The labors of these ministers, together with an occasional suspension of the pulpit services, incident to changes, cover a period of forty years.'

"The pastors were, first: Rev. William C. Davis, from 1789 to 1794; Rev. James Gilliland, from 1802 to 1816; Rev. Michael Dickson, from 1817 to 1832; Zelotes Lee Holmes'. In 1853 the pastorate of Rev. R. H. Reid began, which lasted forty-six years and was ended by his death in 1899."

"Nazareth may well be called 'the Mother of Churches', for wherever her members migrated there was formed a church. Fairview church, in Greenville County, was formed in 1786 from five families, viz: those of John Peden, James Alexander, Samuel Peden, David Peden, and James Nesbit, who settled in that neighborhood. In 1843 other members were set off, who formed Antioch church, a few miles beyond Reidville. During the long pastorate of Rev. R. H. Reid, the following churches were formed, viz: Antioch, at Reidville; Mt. Tabor, at Greer; Mt. Calvary, Wellford and Center Point, at Moore."

"The present church edifice is of brick and was built in 1832. It had the brick floor, high pulpit and high-back pews. Soon after the war these features were changed to a more comfortable floor of wood and a modern pulpit. Again in recent years, the interior of the church was changed to its present arrangement. These sacred walls have resounded with the eloquence of many noted preachers, among whom was Rev. B. N. Palmer, D.D., of New Orleans, who delivered an address at the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the church, on June 15, 1872. At the same time a brief sketch of Nazareth church was read by the pastor, Rev. R. H. Reid, from which liberal copy has been made for this article."

Today Nazareth stands as a living monument to the Presbyterian denomination and those of the early members who founded it. The building and grounds are well preserved and cared for and the cemetery has been greatly enlarged. Handsome stones mark graves of more recent members or descendants of former members and those who are interested can spend much time there noting the epitaphs which were carved on many of the gravestones for generations back.

This cemetery now contains eight generations of the Anderson family from William Anderson and his wife, Rebecca, to the present day. Before the Andersons began burying their dead at Nazareth, members of the family were buried in various family cemeteries throughout the area. These family cemeteries were in part, The Anderson Family Burying Ground originally located near the South Tyger River on "Plain Dealing" Plantation. There is one graveyard in the fork of North and Middle Tyger rivers on the plantation of the late Capt. David Anderson. This has been referred to as the Miller and Otts graveyard. One is on the plantation "Fredonia" near Moore, eight miles south of Nazareth. This is referred to as the Moore graveyard on the site of the original "Walnut Grove" which took its name from a long row of walnut trees planted by "Kate Barry". One is on the Ferguson Creek called the Peden graveyard. Another is on the Enoree River, not far from Old Antioch Presbyterian Church which is referred to as the Massey graveyard.

Many of the plantations on which these graveyards are situated have passed out of the hands of those who might be interested in preserving these places as historic burying grounds. In 1938 the graves of ten members of the family were moved to Nazareth from the Anderson Burying Ground on the South Tyger River. Those graves as they now stand are pictured on the following page and will be of interest to many who visit the cemetery there. The stones as well as the remains were moved in an orderly manner and are located on the plot of the John Crawford Anderson family along the north wall of the cemetery. It was through the efforts of David Watson Anderson, David Buist Anderson, Sr., and Edward Lee Anderson that these graves were moved to Nazareth for their preservation. Included in those graves which were moved are the following with the inscriptions which appear on the grave markers in the order of their placement in the accompanying photograph:

THE SETTING

In order to appreciate fully the conditions under which the Anderson family settled in Spartanburg County, South Carolina, it is necessary to refer to the pages of history which record the early settlement of this area. A new history of Spartanburg County was published in 1940 and from that volume, considerable use has been made here of its contents. In the pages which follow, the reader will become more familiar with the circumstances which existed at the time the family of William Anderson settled on the banks of the South Tyger River in what is now Spartanburg County.

Spartanburg alone among the forty-six counties of South Carolina bears a name based on the character of its settlers. No account exists of the circumstances attending the selection of the name. It appears among the records for the first time in a letter signed John Thomas, and bearing the heading Spartan Regiment, September 11, 1775. Three weeks earlier, on August 21, 1775, William Henry Drayton of the Council of Safety wrote an official report of a meeting held that day at Lawson's Fork. According to tradition this meeting took place at Wofford's Iron Works (now Glendale). Drayton stated that here he had found, for the first time during his tour of the back country, a strong sentiment for the cause of liberty; that he had advised the men present to organize themselves into companies and to form a regiment of their own, independent of Colonel Fletchall, since he seemed determined to adhere to the King's party. Whether Drayton also suggested a name for the regiment is entirely a matter of speculation. Some have thought he did. On the other hand, there were men in the regiment whose education had made them as familiar as Drayton was with ancient history, and who were as capable as he was of realizing the appropriateness of the designation "Spartan" to such men. The name of the regiment was soon extended to the district.

Many of the men who made up the Spartan Regiment had come down the valley trails from Pennsylvania and Virginia after the French and Indian War, eager to secure grants in the rich Piedmont of Carolina. The country was a wilderness before them ready to be settled and enjoyed. The map of Spartanburg County today preserves proof of how abundant the animals were whose skins were the chief wealth of the Cherokees and of the first white men who traded and settled in this section. Many streams bear the names of animals which once drank from them and inhabited their banks. There are in the county today creeks named Wolf, Bear, Buck, Elk, Buffalo and Beaverdam. Upon reading that in one season a man trapped twenty beavers on Fairforest Creek, it is easily understood why two Spartanburg County creeks bear the name Beaverdam. The animal called a "Tyger" by the early settlers was a species of panther, and was the most-dreaded of all the wild creatures. It seems only logical that the three branches of the Tyger River should perpetuate its name. Herds of buffalo were seen by all the early settlers in this area. The tradition handed down from them says that the herds of buffalo had regular "runs" through the forest and tall grass, that they followed the sprouting of the young canes in spring to graze on the tender shoots, and that their paths led across the fords of the streams. According to this tradition, the Indians and Indian traders took over these runs of the buffalo and developed them into paths.

The settlers lived in tents, or in their covered wagons, until they could cut down trees and erect log cabins. Then fields had to be cleared and fenced; the Indian trails transformed into wagon roads; new roads laid out and put in condition for neighborhood use. The streams were not of great service for the transportation of goods because they were too swift and rocky and in places shallow. The consequence was that horses were invaluable. An "old Indian field" on the Enoree River was the scene of annual meetings of men from the surrounding region where they "broke" colts, and traded or raced horses. On August 25, 1775, William Henry Drayton attended a horse race in the Upper District at Duncan's Creek.

With no maps and surveys to guide them, the first settlers from the Northern colonies followed the old Indian trading paths and pushed their way into the fertile valleys of the numerous streams. In the early grants, lands were designated as in "the Packolate settlement", or "the Tyger settlement", or "on the waters of Fairforest Creek", and so on. Tributary streams soon received names from the first settlers on them. Often agents of the landed proprietors organized and arranged for companies of immigrants. In the period of early settlement the approach to what is now Spartanburg County was easier from the Northern colonies than from Charleston. W. L. Trenholm wrote of these first settlers: "As these immigrants had come with wagons and teams, there must have been practical routes from the Alleghanies to the Southern slopes of the Saluda Mountains. It was not only more natural for them to maintain intercourse with the Northern settlements than with those on the coast, but was less difficult, for the whole upper country of South Carolina was a wilderness in 1750 until it was settled."

Stories have been handed down of the experiences of pioneers with wild beasts. As Mrs. Ford sat in the doorway of her log cabin near the old Indian field on Enoree River, a panther leaped over her shoulder into the cabin, and was shot on the hearth by her husband. Near Grindal Shoals on Pacolet River a pioneer hunter was kept in a tree all night by a pack of wolves. The first settlers made a practice of hunting bears in the fall, dressing the skins for robes and rugs, and salting the flesh to be used as bacon.

The experiences of an Irish immigrant family, as recorded in the journal of one of its members, show how some of those settlers who came by Charles Town got to the Up Country. The Chesney family left Ireland August 25, 1772, spent seven weeks and three days on the voyage to Charles Town, and then spent seven weeks and one day in quarantine because there was small pox on the vessel. The eight-months-old baby died of the disease. The Chesney family did not stop at Charles Town; as soon as they were released from quarantine, at Pritchard's shipyard, a few miles above the city, they bargained for transportation by wagon to the Up Country, and set out for "John Winn's old place" (now Winnsboro). They paid at the rate of one penny per pound for hauling. The diary does not indicate how much they brought.

The oldest of the eight children, Alexander, the writer of the diary, was in his seventeenth year, and was apparently his father's mainstay. He went on foot ahead of the wagons, to the home of relatives to announce his family's arrival. These relatives met the family at Winn's, took them to their home, and entertained them until they got one hundred acres of land surveyed. On it they built a cabin, and cleared some of the land. Then a letter came to them from a widowed aunt who resided on Pacolet River, "sixty miles higher up in the country", urging them to settle near her.

The diarist writes: "I proceeded on foot in a right direction for that place, there being no direct road". He had instructions to call at certain homes and obtain, at each, directions how to reach the next. He crossed Broad River in a canoe, and forded Pacolet River near Grindal Shoals. He was then within five miles of his aunt's house. He was warmly welcomed and records that the greater part of the settlers thereabout were relatives. These kinsmen soon found a desirable "vacant tract of four hundred acres" and he had it surveyed for his father. Alexander Chesney recorded that in 1774 he had to go in person to Charles Town to "hurry the patent on his father's lands through the office".

The earliest explorers and traders found no Indian villages in the entire area between the Broad and Saluda Rivers, because it was in the Cherokee hunting grounds. The white men were a long time understanding why their settlement on what seemed unoccupied ground was so resented by the Indians. The viewpoint of the Indians was expressed in a plea made in 1758 by the Lower Cherokees to the Governor of Georgia. They begged him to persuade the South Carolinians to hold themselves within certain bounds because the deer were becoming so scarce the Indians could not find food for their wives and children. But the white men pushed on.

Curiosity asks who was the first white man to set foot on Spartanburg soil; and no exact answer can be given. It seems quite possible, however, that it was the Spanish leader, Pardo, who in 1567, led an expedition from the vicinity of Parris Island to the mountains. Belief in this possibility rests on the fact that in the summer of 1934 a farmer near Inman plowed up with a tractor a stone bearing every evidence of great age and having on it marks clearly made by human hands. These marks appear to be the figures 1567 and some sort of diagram, indicative of locality or direction. The first settlers of the Tyger section heard from Indian traders of a white man who, before their coming, had started a mill near Reidville and had been killed by the Indians; and of another would-be settler, a Baptist preacher named Benjamin Peck, who had mysteriously disappeared, leaving as a memorial Ben's Creek, named for him.

The Indian traders doubtless traversed this area early. It pleases the imagination to picture a packhorse train in the 1700's making its way along the Blackstock Road to the Blockhouse, there to exchange with the Cherokees calico, beads, fire-water, guns and ammunition, for dressed skins and furs. Every driver carried a heavy cowhide whip, and all the horses, ranged in close Indian file, were forced to proceed at a brisk trot, as the chief driver commanded, their bells jingling and jangling, the horsemen shouting and cursing and cracking their whips menacingly, filling the forest and meadow with shouting and tumult. Sometimes these caravans had as many as twenty men and sixty horses. These packtrains usually made about twenty miles a day, setting out soon in the morning, and pausing by mid-afternoon to make camp on some inviting plain or cane meadow.

An Indian trader had to erect for himself a strong blockhouse in which to keep his stores secure. About it were built the cabins and sheds required for use of his family, helpers and livestock. Such blockhouses were not unlike the stockaded forts built by the Horse Rangers as bases from which they patrolled the Indian Line. Quite naturally the location of these strongholds influenced the first permanent settlers to select lands near them. Many Indian traders profited by their acquaintance with the country to select lands with mill sites and fertile soil, and such men became traders among the permanent settlers.

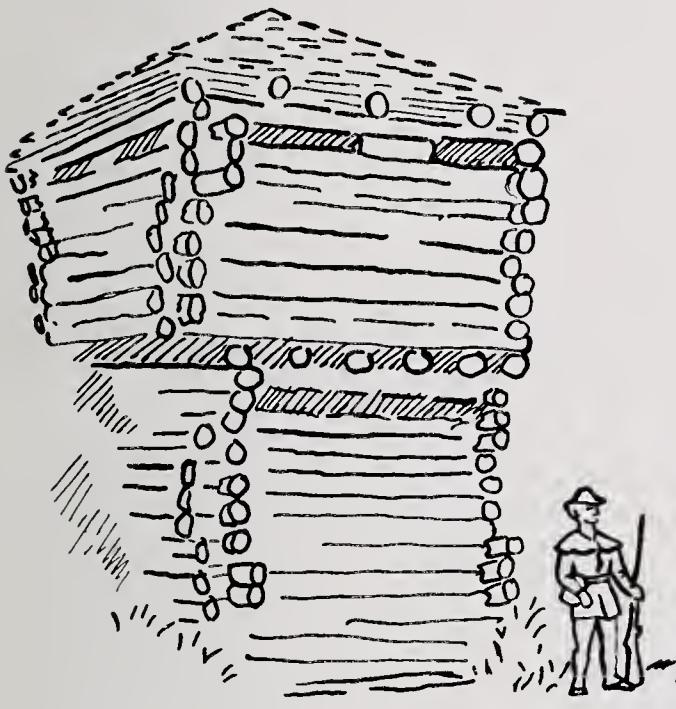

The cowmen had a part in developing the back country, without in the beginning having any intention of establishing permanent settlements. They were here before any grants were made or any clearings. At first nomadic and seasonal, many of them were transformed into householders and land-owners. The clusters of cowpens and the railed enclosures for the cattle were supplemented with sturdier log houses for the women and children accompanying the cowmen to the wilds. Grain fields, gardens, orchards, trading posts followed; and what began as cowpens became settlements.

Elijah Clark, described as the "Daniel Boone of Spartanburg County", is said to have led a large company of settlers in 1755 into the Pacolet Valley. A community from their settlement about Grindal Shoals, was what is now Union County, although its fringes extended up the river toward "Hurricane Shoals" (now Clifton). Clark soon moved on into Georgia and settled there.

The first permanent settlements in what is now Spartanburg County seem to have been those on the various branches of the Tyger River. In 1761 a group of Scotch-Irish Presbyterian settlers came from Pennsylvania and chose for themselves tracts of ground along the branches of the Tyger. In this party were families bearing the names Barry, Moore, Collins, Anderson, Thompson, Vernon, Pearson, Dodd, Jamison, Ray, Penney, McMahon, Miller and Nicholls. Some of these names occur in James Jordan's Fort Prince accounts, kept in 1776. Within a few years another group of Scotch-Irish came through Charles Town into the Tyger area and took up lands mostly on the highlands left unclaimed by the first settlers. Among them were families bearing the names Coan, Snoddy, Peden, Alexander, Gaston, Morton and Nesbitt. These two parties soon occupied an area about twenty miles square. As early as 1765 they had selected a conveniently located site and erected on it a log meeting house which they called Nazareth. Nazareth Church, formally organized in 1772, was the first permanent organization in the county. About it cluster enough associations to fill a volume. Its people have cherished its history, and made of it a shrine of hallowed memories.

The Earle family immigrated to the North Pacolet region in the decade of 1760 and established a strong settlement, which came to be called Earlesville. Earle's Fort, their chief stronghold against the Indians, and later the Tories, was in North Carolina, just across the State line. This family sent vigorous pioneers into Greenville, Pickens and Anderson counties, South Carolina, and Rutherford and Polk counties, North Carolina, and had an important part in the making of Spartanburg County.

BLOCKHOUSE

Companies of Virginia Baptists, angered by the religious intolerance of which they were victims, and imbued with the doctrines of Thomas Jefferson, streamed along the immigrant tide into South Carolina. Some of them settled in the Fairforest basin and built a log meeting house, tradition says in 1765, which became Friendship Church. This meeting house was an "arm" of Fairforest Baptist Church (in the Union County area), which was the first church of its denomination in the Up Country. This church seems to have had other arms, as mission stations were called. The most historic Baptist church in Spartanburg County is Bethel at Woodruff, which has been traced back to its origin in 1771 as an arm of Fairforest. This arm withered during the Revolution, and was reorganized before 1787 as "the Church of Christ on Jamey's Creek". Later this church was moved and became known, first as Woodruff's Meeting House, and finally as Bethel Church. In the settlement about Boiling Springs, it is believed, Fairforest had an arm in 1772.

The militia organization of South Carolina at the outbreak of the Revolution included twelve regiments. The men from the total area between the Broad and Saluda rivers were in the Upper Saluda Regiment, which was under the command of Colonel Thomas Fletchall. Many of the officers and men in his regiment had fought in the French and Indian War on the Carolina frontier in 1760 and 1761. Numbers of them, no doubt, had helped to erect the string of forts along the Indian Line: Earl's Fort, The Blockhouse, Gowan's Fort, Prince's Fort, Jamison's Fort, Wood's Fort, Nicholls' Fort, Blackstock's Fort.

There is reason to believe that the strongest of these blockhouses was Fort Prince. Records of grants show that the region about it was well settled before the Revolution. The account book kept in Fort Prince shows how all of these forts were operated in periods of Indian warfare. It is the only such book locally preserved, and it proves that the country was pretty well settled and that there was already much agricultural development by 1775; for the inhabitants were selling to the fort commissary, James Jordan, flour, tobacco, wheat, steers, tallow, butter, and Indian corn, in considerable quantities. The following names of persons who made sales to the fort appear in Jordan's account: Alexander, Rea, Frances Dodds, Samuel Brice, James Miller, Alexander Vernon, Nathaniel Miller, John Timons, George Salmon, John McElhenny, Thomas Prince, John Lander, William Feals, Thomas Barnett, Mrs. McCarter, Mrs. Samons, John McCarter, Robert Lusk, James Rytchey, William Readman. Only four of these people made their marks instead of signing their names and all those signing thus traded for small amounts. This may be taken to indicate that the people of these communities had education. One entry in the accounts of James Jordan shows him as having received from "Captain John Gowins, Three Bills Cons. to discharge a debt to Heart Due in Charles Town". The amount was one hundred six pounds, fifteen shillings. Possibly this John Gowins commanded at the fort a few miles distant from Fort Prince, on the Indian Line, mentioned often in Revolutionary stories as Gowan's Fort, which was the nucleus of what was to become the flourishing Gowansville community. The old Gowan's Fort, local tradition says, was put in repair and used as a stronghold by deserters during the Civil War. When the World War I soldiers were in training, the range for their artillery practice included the site of Gowan's Fort.

Men were busy from their arrival, in carrying on trade. They raised cattle and sold them on the hoof in Charles Town, or Augusta or Philadelphia. They grew tobacco, and packed it into hogsheads to protect it from the weather on its way to market. To these hogshead shafts were attached, and horses then rolled them to market over the wretched roads. Wagons were used to transport such articles as skins, tallow, ginseng, hemp, flax, beeswax, and iron wares. Wagoners were among the first capitalists; and in the years immediately preceding and during the Revolutionary War it was possible for a man with a four-horse wagon to make as much as 300% on one trip from Pacolet settlement to Charles Town, taking down produce and bringing back manufactured goods, ammunition, rice, salt and sugar, to be sold to his neighbors.

Grist mills were among the earliest enterprises in every settlement, and were often community centers. Public records establish that the first iron works in South Carolina was erected in 1773 by Joseph Buffington on Lawson's Fork, at the site where Glendale now stands. The name was soon changed to "Wofford's Iron Works", because William Wofford owned the land on which the iron works stood. Traditions in the Smith family say that, on Dutchman's Creek, Sanford Smith had iron works, where he made guns used in the Revolution.

Certainly, in spite of its remoteness, the Indian menace, and the other difficulties it presented, the region which was to become Spartanburg had, when the Revolution broke, numerous settlers with a considerable development of community life and diversified industries. Of it, upon the settlement of the boundary dispute, in 1772, Governor Montagu wrote exultingly: "The soil and general appearance is very fertile, producing luxuriantly indigo, hemp, tobacco, and all English grains; a great part of the country is thickly settled."

The South Carolina Assembly made no provision, before the Revolution, for public roads above the Broad River. The oldest roads in Spartanburg County may be traced back to the Indian trade. At the northern end of the Blackstock Road, which ran in a northwesterly direction from Congarees, stood the Blockhouse—a noted landmark in county history. It was on the Indian Line and was designated officially as the terminus of the State line in 1772. The Georgia Road followed an Indian trading path from Virginia. It traversed Spartanburg County in a southwesterly direction, crossing the Broad River at the Cherokee Ford and the Enoree River at Anderson's Bridge. In the upper part of the county were paths parallel to the Georgia Road and scarcely less important. The Buncombe Road probably originated as a path from the Congarees trading post near Columbia, and led into the Cherokee country of upper Greenville County and beyond. Entering Spartanburg County near the present town of Enoree, this road ran along the ridge separating the Enoree and Tyger watersheds and passed into Greenville County near Greer. While all of the oldest roads have so changed that only here and there can clear signs be found of their first roadbeds, yet they remain fundamentally the same.

The country traversed by these roads had no defined boundaries. In 1767 the inhabitants of the Up Country—listed in provincial records as the "Parish of St. Marks"—sent to the government at Charles Town a lengthy petition for recognition of the "rights of the Back Country". One demand was that lines of all counties be run to the Cherokee boundary so that inhabitants need "no longer wander in the mazes of supposition".

So remote seemed the Back Country, as late as 1770, that Lieutenant Governor Bull, making a tour over the State in his chariot, did not penetrate beyond what he described as the "uncivilized settlements" above the junction of Broad and Saluda. Bull, reporting on this tour, wrote the home government that at this time there were more than 5,000 men living in the upper part of South Carolina "beyond a moral possibility of being represented in assembly while elections are held in the parish church".

Although the Circuit Court Act of 1769 provided for the redistricting of the State and the erection of a courthouse in each district, at which courts should be held twice yearly, not until November, 1772, could the provisions of the act be put into effect. In that year the inhabitants of what is now Spartanburg were first able to transact legal business at their own district courthouse at Ninety Six.

The judges and lawyers who made the first circuit returned to Charles Town amazed and delighted with their experience. They said the back countrymen would, with proper advantages, make as fine a population as any on earth.

This fine population of back countrymen included large numbers of Scotch-Irish Presbyterians and dissenting Baptists, both of which groups had behind them a proud record of struggle for liberty of conscience and democratic principals in government. Such were the people to whom Drayton and Tennent brought an appeal from the newly formed Provincial Congress of South Carolina—a body formed in January, 1775, by elected representatives of the people, and replacing, by its own action, the King's "House of Assembly".

The members of this Congress, June 4, 1775, affixed their names to a document by which they solmenly bound themselves "to associate in the defense of South Carolina against every foe and to hold all those persons inimical to the liberties of the colonies who shall refuse to subscribe to this Association". The Congress, June 14, 1775, appointed a Council of Safety "with power to do whatever the safety of the State demanded," and in July this Council sent its representatives into the Up Country to explain the revolutionary movement to the people and appeal to them to set their signatures to the "Association". The response of the population to this appeal drew the inhabitants of the back country into a common struggle with the rest of the state and marked an epoch in their history.

WILLIAM ANDERSON

The desire for religious liberty and perhaps more room and better opportunities brought William Anderson to America. He was probably among those<sup>1</sup> "Presbyterians in Ulster who were rendered exceedingly uncomfortable by reason of the tyranny and exactions of their despotic monarchs, by the restrictions and penalties imposed by Parliament, the intolerance and persecutions instigated by the bishops, and the rapacity and greed of the landlords". Such conditions estranged them from their country, and led them to turn their eyes to the new colonies planted in America, where they could secure for themselves homes, and civil and religious liberty, impossible in their own land. As early as 1713 both ministers and people began to come to America. The province of Pennsylvania, guaranteeing equal rights and advantages of civil and religious liberty, especially attracted them.

These early Scotch-Irish Presbyterians were generally agriculturists. When they landed at Wilmington or Philadelphia, they were drawn at once into the rural districts, and usually settled on lands along the streams or on lands near the great springs which abounded in the country, in Chester County, in Bucks, Northampton, Lancaster and Dauphin.<sup>2</sup> "Then when encouragement was given and licenses were granted, they began to cross over the Susquehanna at Harris' Ferry, now Harrisburg, from 1726 to 1736, and settled along the Conocoquique and about the Big Spring, Middle Spring, Falling Spring and Rocky Spring, in the central part of the valley, and on up along the Conocoquique and its several branches, in the vicinity of what is now Chambersburg and Mercersburg." Land warrants were sold from 1736 onwards. Thereupon a great tide of emigration set into all these regions in the valley and from there on to the Potomac and down the valley of Virginia into the Carolinas and Tennessee, and across into Kentucky. A thousand families are said to have arrived in the state of North Carolina from the more northerly settlements in 1764. "No other country," says Dr. Ramsey, "furnished the Province of South Carolina with as many citizens as the north of Ireland"; and "their religion," as Carlyle has somewhere said, "was the chief fact about them". Theirs was that system of religious faith and worship "which" says Froude, "has ever borne an inflexible front to illusion and mendacity, and has preferred rather to be ground to powder like flint, than to bend before violence, or melt under enervating temptation."

Of such sort was William Anderson, born in 1706 of Scotch family. According to tradition, he emigrated from County Antrim, Ireland, with his wife, Rebecca Denny, and their sons, John and David, about 1742.

They seem to have settled first in Chester County, Pennsylvania. Later they went to that part of Cumberland County, which is now Franklin County, cut off in 1784. There on the Conocoquique, a stream somewhat famous in the early annals of Cumberland, they had a mill. Probably about the time of Braddock's defeat, which left that part of the country unprotected against the French and Indians, they emigrated to the Waxhaws, South Carolina, possibly in the neighborhood of the Steels, Starrs, Masseys, Pedens and other sturdy folk, who have consistently stood for representative democracy in church and state.

In this region their son, John, married and located permanently. From 1770, possibly from an earlier date, until after 1790, certainly a part of William Anderson's family resided in Charleston, South Carolina. Tradition says that William Anderson went to Charleston from the Waxhaws. One cannot but marvel that he went to Charleston, even at that period no congenial home for a Scotch-Irish pioneer. One wonders what drew him there.

It was in Charleston, 1772, that David Anderson, William's son, married the cultivated Englishwoman, Miriam Mayson. It was there, it is said, that his daughter, Sarah, married William Breakin, and there she resided afterwards for a number of years. It was in Charleston, most likely, that the youngest son, Denny, presumably born in the old Ninety Six District, got his schooling.

State records show that in August, 1763, William Anderson took up 200 acres of land in what is now Laurens County. It was in December of this year that the youngest son, Denny, was born when his mother, who lived to be ninety-six, was fifty-three years of age. It seems that William Anderson was driven by malaria from this Little River, Laurens County, farm, to the Spartanburg side of the Enoree River. Here, according to documentary evidence, he resided near the present Anderson's Bridge, on the old Georgia road extending from Virginia through the Carolinas westward, until fear of the Indians drove him to the South Tyger River, where his son, Major David Anderson, lived.

"While living here," substantially in the words of his grandson, the late Enoree James Anderson, "he observed one day to the southwest a great fire, with smoke boiling up at what was afterwards known as the Brown house, or the Moon place. Suspecting that Indians were on the warpath, he sent his son, Denny, then only a lad, and a man who lived with him across the river to investigate. They approached near enough to see that the family living there had been murdered, and the house burned, the feather beds ripped open and scattered to the winds. William Anderson immediately took his wife, Rebecca, then suffering from a dislocated hip, due to a fall from her horse, put her into a rocking chair, strapped it on a horse, and carried her into a hollow on what is now known as the Hiram Bennett place, where she remained concealed until help could be summoned from his son, David, to move to South Tyger River." There, it seems, they lived on the west bank of the river, at no great distance from the present "Holly Hill", until William Anderson, at the hands of Indians and Tories, forfeited his life to the patriot cause.

The following extract from Howe's "History of the Presbyterian Church in South Carolina," bears on these events:

"Just at the close of the war, after the treaty of peace had been signed, they murdered Mr. Anderson, the father of Major David Anderson. They shot him in his bed at night. They permitted his wife to escape, allowing her nothing but her nightdress to protect her from the cold. She that night waded two rivers, and came to the house of Mr. Crawford, the father of the late senator from this district, a distance of five or six miles.

"James Silliman, a lad of twelve or thirteen years, was at the home of Mr. Anderson that night. They stabbed him in two or three places, and threw him into a brush heap, supposing him to be dead. He recovered, and lived in the community to a good old age. They took Mr. Anderson out of the house, split his head with a tomahawk and scalped him. They also burned his house. The same gang also murdered another old man and his son nearby, and fired the house of Major David Anderson, who, with his family, was that night at Ft. Prince. This was said to have been done by Indians, but the community generally believed that the Tories were at the bottom of it, if not the real actors, painted like Indians. Mr. Anderson was quite an old man who, because of his age and palsy, took little or no part in the war, but was a staunch Whig and contributed in every way he could to help the cause of liberty. When Major Anderson returned home from the fort he lived for some time under the wagon shed. His son, James, was born under the wagon shed."

A similar account of the fate of William Anderson is given in Landrum's "History of Spartanburg County".

"William Anderson was buried in the Snoddy bottoms wrapped in a cow's hide. His remains were afterwards removed to a burial ground near James Chamblin's," at the time of the burial of his wife, Rebecca Denny, in 1806. (The graves of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny and other members of the family buried in the family burying ground were removed in 1938 and placed in the Nazareth Presbyterian Church Cemetery). Their resting place is indicated by a single gravestone with the inscription:

"In memory of William Anderson and his wife, Rebecca. The former of whom was born in 1706, and was murdered by a party of Tories<sup>1</sup> near the close of the Revolution. The latter was born in 1710 and died in 1806. Erected by their affectionate daughter, Sarah Breakin."

REBECCA DENNY ANDERSON, the wife of William Anderson, was a woman of outstanding character. She evidently belongs to a family distinguished in the old world and in the new. The family records were lost in the fire that destroyed their home. She reached extreme old age, and became almost totally blind, as have several of her descendants.

Six children were born to this family:

John Anderson
David Anderson
Hannah Anderson
Rebecca Anderson
Sarah Anderson (Breakin)
Denny Anderson

CAPT. JOHN ANDERSON

JOHN ANDERSON was born in 1737, the son of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny, became a resident of York County, S. C., having married Jane Neely and remained there on account of his wife's family, locating on Fishing Creek. He was an officer in the Colonial army and later in the Revolutionary army. After the war, Capt. Anderson became quite a wealthy man for his day, having settled on very fertile lands. The following inscriptions appear on his tombstone and that of his wife in Bethesda Cemetery, York County, S. C.:

Revolution, who died
December 1814 age 77 years

Mrs. Jane Anderson who died
March 1816
age 74 years

MAJOR DAVID ANDERSON

The following sketch of Major David Anderson, second son of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny, was taken from the "History of the Presbyterian Church in South Carolina", by George Howe, D.D., Volume I, page 542:

"He was born in the state of Pennsylvania, on the 25th August, 1741. His parents were originally from Scotland. When they emigrated to the North American Colonies, they settled first in Pennsylvania, and lived there for many years until their children were grown. From Pennsylvania they moved to the Waxhaw settlement; then to South River, in the present district of Laurens; and then to the South Fork of Tyger River, Spartanburg district.

"He received a liberal English education, but when and where I have no means of ascertaining at this time.

"He married Miriam Mayson, an English lady, in the city of Charleston, in the year 1772. Her father, Col. Mayson, emigrated to the province of Carolina a few years before the marriage of his daughter, and settled near the Island Ford, in the present district of Edgefield. He took an active part in the war.

"Major Anderson was engaged, for a long time before the Revolutionary War, surveying public lands for the Colonial government. When the war commenced, fearing that his house might be burned by the Tories or Indians, he prepared a nice buckskin and sewed up his plats, surveys and claims against the government, and suspended them in a hollow tree in the woods, where he thought they would be secure. At the close of the war he went to hunt for his buckskin, when, to his great surprise and mortification, he found the skin and papers cut and torn into innumerable fragments, lying at the root of the tree. In his great anxiety and care to secure them from the Tories and Indians, he had forgotten the flying squirrels. Thus was the labor of years lost. The government, afterwards, offered him thirty or forty negroes as a compensation for his services. Negroes then were not worth more than one hundred and fifty dollars on the average. He did not think such property valuable, much preferring the gold eagles, which he never obtained.

“He held both a civil and military office under the Colonial government. He received his commission as major of the militia at Newbern, North Carolina, the 6th of December, 1770. A large portion of the district of Spartanburg, at that time, belonged to the province of North Carolina. After the Declaration of Independence, he resigned his office as major under the English Colonial government, and engaged actively in the war, sometimes acting in the capacity of a private soldier, at others of Captain and Major. He was at the battle of Ninety Six, and acted in the capacity of Captain. During the action, he planned and executed a manoeuvre which gained him great applause, and terminated in chagrin and loss to the British. A portion of the British, at one stage of the action, were fortified behind a brick wall. He was ordered to attack it, and did so without any success. The British, safe behind the wall, received no injury from their bullets. He ordered his company to cease firing at the top of the wall, and to shoot at its base. This soon had the desired effect. The enemy not only raised their heads above the wall, but got upon it, thinking that the Whigs were unable to reach them with their rifles, and frequently pointed with their fingers significantly to the base—as much as to say, ‘you can’t quite reach us’. As soon as he thought that the British were beginning to feel secure in their position on the wall, he ordered his company each to select their man, beginning at one end of the company, and at the opposite end of the British on the wall. At the command to fire, some fell inside and some fell outside of the wall, finding to their surprise and grief, when it was too late, that they were not out of range of the American rifles. He was at the seige of Charleston, Eutaw Springs, and at the taking of two forts at Augusta.

“He considered his life in more danger during the war when at home, than when in the army. The headquarters of the Tories in this section was near his house. He frequently pointed out to his children, after the war, a large oak on the river, in the thick branches of which he had lain concealed for days, and from which he had several times seen the Tories hunting him. His greatest bereavement during the war, was the loss of his father, whose age and infirmities, he thought would shield him from the Tories . . .

“He was a tall man, six feet two inches high, with black eyes and hair, of pleasing manners, hospitable, and very fond of company. During his stay at Ninety Six, he associated with the families of the British officers. He was often heard to speak in terms of great respect of the wife of Col. Cregen—that she was a ‘lady of the true English stamp, and although the wife of a British officer, a staunch Whig in principle’.

“In Landrum’s ‘Colonial and Revolutionary History of Upper South Carolina’, pp. 101 and 357, Major Anderson is mentioned in connection with the battle of the Canebrakes, and also as a member of Capt. John Barry’s company, which marched in pursuit of “Bloody Bill” Cunningham, after his murderous raid to the up-country of South Carolina, November, 1781. Major Anderson owned nearly all the lands around where Maj. Franklin Leland Anderson’s descendants now live and his remains were interred in the family graveyard on the James Chamblin place. (All of the family graves in this cemetery were removed in 1938 and placed in the Nazareth Presbyterian Church Cemetery.) Simple stones were erected to them by their son, James Mason Anderson, though he always insisted that his mother's name was Miriam; that the name Maria, on her tombstone, was a mistake. David Anderson and his wife spent their last days with Henrietta Chamblin. For many years Mrs. Fannie Miller Anderson had in her possession the old arm chair in which Miriam Mayson died. She was blind some years before her death. On January 2nd, 1811, James Mason Anderson carried his first born son, David—then one day old—across the river with snow on the ground, to the Chamblin place to show him to his aged mother, then almost blind.

"Will recorded in Book 'B', page 128, Spartanburg Courthouse."

NOTE: It will be surmised that David Anderson had already given the bulk of his property to his children. When the Chamblin place was sold, James Mason Anderson raised the final bid by $1,000.00 in order to keep the burying ground in the family. He gave it to his son Mason Gilliland Anderson; then sold to David Anderson; deeded to his son John Crawford Anderson and later purchased from the remaining heirs by his son David Buist Anderson.

Major David Anderson died May 31, 1827. His wife died in 1818.

The following children were born to David Anderson and Miriam Mayson:

Sarah Anderson (Jamison)
Rebecca Anderson
William B. Anderson
James Mason Anderson
Henrietta Anderson (Chamblin)

SARAH ANDERSON JAMISON was born June 22, 1775, the daughter of Major David Anderson and Miriam Mayson. She married Samuel Jamison and lived on lands which were given to her by her father known as the "Jamison Place" in Spartanburg County, S. C. These lands bordered on the west side of South Tyger River and across the river lived her sister Henrietta Anderson Chamblin. Two brothers, William Anderson and James Mason Anderson, owned land just above there. At the point where Provey's and Ben's creeks came together at the South Tyger River there was a noted fishing hole where they often met, each sitting on his own land. Records bear out that she must have been of very strong character and was active in the work of Nazareth Church as she left in her will a donation to it of $1,000.00. She is said to have taken great pleasure in "entertaining the ministers" who frequently visited in the home. She and her husband are both buried in Nazareth Cemetery. They had no children.

REBECCA ANDERSON was born June 25, 1776, the daughter of Maj. David Anderson and Miriam Mayson. She died young.

WILLIAM B. ANDERSON was born March 24, 1778, the son of Maj. David Anderson and Miriam Mayson. He married Patsy Greer, who lived near Greer, S. C. He first settled on South Tyger River, but afterwards moved to Stone Mountain, Georgia. The following children were born to them:

David Anderson
Robert Anderson
Samuel Anderson
Mary Anderson (Dickerson)
Maria Anderson (Woodruff)
Sallie Anderson
Katy Anderson (Elam)
Henrietta Anderson (Hambrick)

Of this family very little is known. David and Robert Anderson both married and left families living in Cherokee County, Georgia. Samuel Anderson was in the war in Florida and died near Stone Mountain, Ga., leaving a family. Mary was married to a Mr. Dickerson and left a son and a daughter. Maria married Isaac Woodruff in December, 1828. She was born March 22, 1808 and he was born September 10, 1806, the son of Esquire Samuel Woodruff. They settled near the town of Woodruff, S. C. Mr. Woodruff died August 5, 1855, and Maria died February 16, 1889. To them were born the following children:

Mary A. Woodruff (Todd)
Cyrena C. Woodruff (Roebuck)
William A. Woodruff
Samuel P. Woodruff
James A. Woodruff
John D. Woodruff
Franklin Buist Woodruff

Sallie was never married. Katy married Mr. Elam and Henrietta married a Mr. Hambrick who both left families.

MARY WOODRUFF TODD was born October 28, 1833, the daughter of Isaac Woodruff and Maria Anderson. She was married in 1860 to William Todd, of Mississippi. Four daughters were born to them of which nothing is known.

CYRENA WOODRUFF ROEBUCK was born June 18, 1835 and died April 4, 1878. She was the daughter of Isaac Woodruff and Maria Anderson and was married Nov. 11, 1866 to Capt. John P. Roebuck. They lived near Woodruff and had four children. Two of the children died early. Carrie was never married and Tom married Lizzie Drummond and moved to Texas. He died there and left two children who returned to South Carolina. Homer and Letha Roebuck were both married and lived with their families near Woodruff, S. C.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF was born October 1, 1838, the son of Isaac Woodruff and Maria Anderson. He was probably one of the best educated men of his community. After attending his home schools he studied at "Slabtown", a famous school of that day conducted by Rev. John L. Kennedy. He died while serving in the Confederate army near Culpepper, Va., on December 14, 1861. His body was brought home and buried by the Masons.

SAMUEL P. WOODRUFF was born July 23, 1841, the son of Isaac Woodruff and Maria Anderson. He fought through the Confederate War and in 1866 he moved to Mississippi. He was married May 7, 1868 to Miss A. Lou Todd. They reared a large family, most of whom are married. Their oldest son, Isaac, was a physician at Courtland, Miss.

JAMES A. WOODRUFF was born November 30, 1843, the son of Isaac Woodruff and Maria Anderson. After serving through the Confederate War, he moved to Mississippi in 1866 and was married January 16, 1863 to Fannie Drummond. She was the daughter of Rev. Simpson Drummond. Four sons and one daughter were born to them. Nothing is known of the sons, however, the daughter, Eva Woodruff studied several years at Columbus, Miss. and received her A.B. degree from the University of Mississippi. She won a handsome medal in a literary contest with the young men of the University, taught school and kept house for her father at Courtland, Mississippi.

JOHN D. WOODRUFF was born February 19, 1846, the son of Isaac Woodruff and Maria Anderson. He served in the Confederate War, was married May 9, 1867 to Hattie Bryson and they moved to Panola, Miss. in 1873. A large family of sons and daughters was born to them.

FRANKLIN BUIST WOODRUFF was born August 5, 1849, the son of Isaac Woodruff and Maria Anderson. He was married November 16, 1875 to Maggie Westmoreland. They went to Panola County, Miss. in 1876 where he taught school for nine years. He returned to Spartanburg, S. C. in 1885 and for over thirty years taught school at Woodruff, Cross Anchor, Enoree, Pacolet Mills, Greer and other places. He was principal of the county normal school at Spartanburg for two years and served one term as County Superintendent of Education. He later resided at Woodruff and taught school at Lanford, S. C. To them were born eight children. Four died in infancy; the children who lived are as follows:

William Anderson Woodruff
Nellie W. Woodruff (Hogan)
Vallie V. Woodruff (Anderson)
Peden E. Woodruff

WILLIAM ANDERSON WOODRUFF, son of Franklin Buist Woodruff and Maggie Westmoreland, received his A.B. degree from the University of South Carolina and graduated from the S. C. Medical College, Charleston, with a M.D. degree. He practiced medicine at Cateechee, Pickens County, S. C.

NELLIE WOODRUFF HOGAN was the daughter of Franklin Buist Woodruff and Maggie Westmoreland. She married Prof. W. S. Hogan after graduating from Limestone College. Prof. Hogan was from Congaree, S. C. and received his A.B. degree from the University of S. C., Columbia. He taught for eight years, resided on his farm and had charge of the school nearby. One son was born to them.

VALLIE WOODRUFF ANDERSON was born July 7, 1884, the daughter of Franklin Buist Woodruff and Maggie Westmoreland. She received her A.B. degree from Limestone College and taught school. For a time she conducted the Girls' Tomato Club in Spartanburg County and was married June 17, 1914 to William Deal Anderson of Lockhart, S. C.

PEDEN E. WOODRUFF was born May 14, 1892, the son of Franklin Buist Woodruff and Maggie Westmoreland. He attended the University of South Carolina.

THE THIRD GENERATION

JAMES MASON ANDERSON—"TYGER JIM"

JAMES MASON ANDERSON was born January 28, 1784, the son of Maj. David Anderson and Miriam Mayson. As has been stated already, the house of David

Anderson was burned at the time of the murder of his father, William Anderson (1783), however, the family lived in an improvised wagon shed until another dwelling could be built. It was under this shed that James Mason Anderson was born. The shed was blown down the night he was moved to the new house. The site of this house is what was later called the "Chamblin Place", a short distance from the family burial ground. At that time school facilities were very limited and it was always his regret that he had no greater training. However, he attended Blundell's celebrated Greenville School eight miles from where his father lived. His school term was short and was confined to the summer months only. As a barefoot boy he would go on Monday morning and return Friday afternoon, staying with his uncle, Denny Anderson, who lived near the school. (Denny Anderson was the youngest son of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny.) This uncle also had a son James, and to distinguish them the names of

"Tyger Jim" and "Enoree Jim" were given, by which they were afterwards known.

When he was grown he began farming on Ben's Creek and was quite successful. By good management, he added milling and stock raising to his other business, and was able to buy considerable adjoining land and became the largest landowner in his vicinity. He was as much a wagoner as a farmer, hauling farm products to Charleston, Hamburg and Columbia, bringing in return dry goods and groceries to the merchants of the up-country. During the war of 1812 he drove his wagon to Baltimore, Md., and stopped his team on the public square in Washington, D. C. He walked into the capitol, where he recognized an old friend, Elchendor, then a member of Congress from Ohio. Mr. Anderson was a man of fine judgment, perseverance and originality of nature. His desire was that his eight sons should receive liberal educations and study a profession. Upon the completion of this by each he gave a gold watch and a sizable tract of land.

1379707

He was married February 22, 1810 to Mary "Polly" Miller. She was born November 18, 1788, the daughter of Michael Miller and Nancy Vernon. She was a beautiful lady and even in her old age was admired by her sons, who always liked to see her well dressed. She was an expert in every branch of housekeeping, which was no light undertaking for a large family and many negroes. For them were manufactured jeans, linseys and blankets from home-grown wool. She was especially concerned for her husband's faithful negro drivers, "Uncle Joe" and "Pappy Jake" and she made sure for their comfort while on their long trips to and from market. They were often entrusted with large sums of money, before the day of banks and express companies. She was particularly fond of pleasing her husband who liked so much to entertain friends and relatives in the home, and he spared nothing to see that "a good time was had by all". The comforts and conveniences of their home were far above the ordinary.

Mary "Polly" Miller Anderson died May 27, 1856 and was buried in the Nazareth Presbyterian Church Cemetery in Spartanburg County. "Tyger Jim" survived his wife by seventeen years and passed his old age with his son, Maj. Franklin Leland

Anderson. From 1863-65 he was very much alone, the daughter-in-law having died and Maj. F. L. Anderson was serving in the Confederate War. During this time he directed the faithful slaves on the farm, hunted wild turkey, fished and worked his garden and truck patches and at the same time provided something to please the grandchildren.

On May 1, 1865, a regiment of Pennsylvania cavalry, under Col. Palmer, in pursuit of Jefferson Davis, passed through his place. Besides taking a lot of valuable stock, the house was plundered, papers and silver were taken. Late in the afternoon of the same day three Irish stragglers following the regiment demanded gold of Mr. Anderson, which they thought was hidden somewhere. In order to make him tell them where it was, they put a rope around his neck and he was swung up three times to a beam in a shed. A negro boy was forced to do this at the point of a pistol. When he was almost dead, they beat him severely and left him to die. He crawled to a hiding place in an ivy bluff near the river, where he was later found and made comfortable by Mr. James Fortenberry. It might be of interest to note that the three stragglers were later caught and shot after committing similar acts of violence at other places. Mr. Anderson lived to be 86 years old and died June 24, 1870. He was buried beside his wife in the Nazareth Cemetery, Spartanburg County, S. C.

To them were born ten children:

CAPTAIN DAVID ANDERSON

CAPT. DAVID ANDERSON was born January 1, 1811, the son of James Mason Anderson and Mary "Polly" Miller, was the grandson of Major David Anderson of Revolutionary fame and great-grandson of William Anderson, the original Anderson settler on Tyger River.

CAPT. DAVID ANDERSON

His early education was received in the schools of the neighborhood and he studied under the Rev. A. A. Porter in Spartanburg, S. C. His father wanted him to study law and he was placed in the office of Elisha Bomar, then Clerk of Court. He preferred life in the country and began farming in the fork of North and Middle Tyger rivers. Later he built his house, known as "Pleasant Falls", at Anderson's Mill, seven miles from Spartanburg and in sight of Nazareth Church. He was a successful business man and farmer, never having any desire to change his home or occupation.

Mr. Anderson united with Nazareth Church at an early age and throughout his lifetime was active in its work both in time and with his financial support.

He was married March 28, 1839 to Harriet Maria Brockman, the ceremony having been performed by Rev. John G. Landrum. She was born February 28, 1819, the daughter of Thomas Patterson Brockman and Mary Kilgore of Pliney, Greenville County, S. C. After attending school in Greenville, she completed her education at Salem, North Carolina. She was always a lover of books, reading standard works of history and fiction—Prescott, Dickens, Scott, Milton and Addison. She united with the Baptist church early in life and after marriage joined Nazareth Church with her husband. Mrs. Anderson was active in the work of both church and Sunday School. It was a common occurrence to see Mr. and Mrs. Anderson sit at the communion table at Nazareth with their three sons, one an elder and two deacons, their four daughters and their husbands who were all elders.

Their home was situated along a public highway and Mrs. Anderson was noted for her hospitality, not only to friends and relatives, but to passing strangers. During the Confederate War they cared for many unfortunate soldiers passing along the road. Mrs. Anderson also found it difficult to feed and clothe the slaves who were dependent upon them during the hard years of the Civil War. Two orphan nephews, Henry and Bennie Stokes, were taken into this home at an early age and shared with the other children all the advantages which were supplied.

On March 28, 1889, they celebrated their "Golden Wedding" anniversary and lived three years afterwards. As result of a fall, Mr. Anderson received a dislocated hip, but recovered sufficiently to use a rolling chair.

Mrs. Anderson used a rolling chair also in her later years, however, they were unaware of the final illness of each other. She died Friday afternoon, July 1, 1892 and he died twenty-three hours later on July 2, 1892. It was unusual for a couple who had spent fifty-three years together, to pass on at the later years, however, they were unaware of the final illness of each other. She died Friday afternoon, July 1, 1892 and he died twenty-three hours later on July 2, 1892. It was unusual for a couple who had spent fifty-three years together, to pass on at the same time. They were both buried at Nazareth Cemetery, Sunday, July 3, 1892, under the same service and in the same grave. The funeral was conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. H. Reid, assisted by Rev. W. L. Boggs.

To them were born nine children:

Nancy Cunningham Anderson
 John Crawford Anderson
 Mary Elizabeth Anderson (Moore)
 Henrietta Alethia Anderson (Smith)
 James Henry Anderson
 Thomas Brockman Anderson
 Harriet Maria Anderson (Anderson)
 David Perrin Anderson
 Emma Frances Anderson (Oeland)

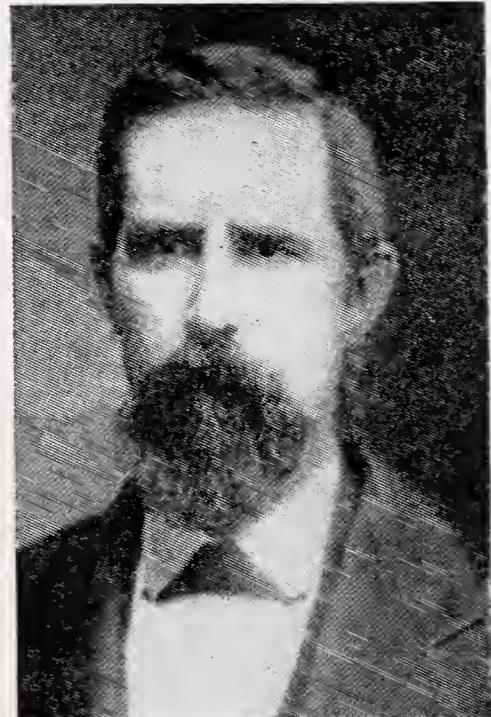

NANCY CUNNINGHAM ANDERSON was born January 25, 1840, the daughter of Capt. David Anderson and Harriet Maria Brockman. She died as a small child September 6, 1841 and was buried in Nazareth Cemetery, Spartanburg County, S. C.

JOHN CRAWFORD ANDERSON

JOHN CRAWFORD ANDERSON was born at "Pleasant Falls" in Spartanburg County, S. C., January 18, 1842, the son of Capt. David Anderson and Harriet Maria Brockman.

On his father's side he traces through "Tyger Jim", Maj. David and to William Anderson, the original Anderson of this line. On his mother's side he descends from the Brockmans and Kilgores, from the Millers and Alexander Vernon. When he was fifteen years old he entered the Thalian Academy, "Slabtown", and studied under Rev. John L. Kennedy where he remained for two years. In 1859 he entered the State Military Academy and spent two years at the Arsenal in Columbia, S. C. and graduated from The Citadel in Charleston in 1863. He entered the Confederate service as Adjutant of the 13th Regiment, S. C. V. then commanded by his uncle, Col. Ben T. Brockman, and served there until the end of the war. He was wounded once in the battle of the Wilderness and for many years his sister had in her possession the ball which was cut from his side. He was elected a deacon in Nazareth Presbyterian Church January 7, 1872, and while serving in this capacity, was made a trustee of the Presbytery, and held that position until 1884 when elected an elder.

In 1887 he and his family moved to Spartanburg at the time he was appointed postmaster there and he transferred his membership to the church in Spartanburg and was soon made an elder. After four years there he moved with his family to Moore and transferred his church membership to the Center Point Presbyterian Church and was made an elder there, serving until his death. For many years he served as a trustee of the Reidville High School and was Secretary-Treasurer. He served one term in the state legislature where he was instrumental in having the stock law passed. He was repeatedly urged to again offer for public office but declined, preferring to attend to his farming interests. He did, however, accept the position as Brigadier General of

ANDERSON

Volunteers in the State Militia. On his farm at Moore he established a very fine vineyard and his grapes were known throughout the area. He died at his home at Moore, February 23, 1892 at the age of 50, and was buried in the Nazareth Cemetery. Upon his death, the Session of the Center Point Church inscribed a page in the Minute Book in his memory, a copy of which was sent to his family.

He was married February 27, 1866 to Emma Buist. She was born near Greenville, S. C., September 14, 1843, the daughter of Rev. E. T. Buist, D.D., and his second wife Emma Raymond Hornby. Her early years were spent on the farm where she was born, "Somer's Hill", and until she was twelve was taught by her father. She was then sent to school in Charleston and stayed at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Mary Lamb Buist. Some time prior to the Civil War, she moved with her father to Laurens, S. C., where the children were put in school and he took charge of the college there. The college was closed at the outbreak of the war; however, Mrs. Anderson graduated before it was closed. The family then returned to Greenville where her father became pastor of a small Presbyterian Church. After her marriage, she and her husband moved to the country. Some years afterwards her health failed and for a number of years she remained an invalid, however, she recovered and during her later years was active again. She was organist for the Nazareth Church and it was no uncommon sight to see several of her children sitting along side her on the organ bench during services. After her husband's death, she remained for a time at the home in Moore, but later with the three younger children moved to Edgefield, S. C. so that they could be put in school. While there she made her home with her oldest daughter, Mrs. Emma Harriet Anderson Dunovant. Mrs. Anderson died at Edgefield, November 26, 1918, and was buried at Nazareth Cemetery in Spartanburg County.

To them were born nine children:

Emma Harriet Anderson (Dunovant)
Edward Hornby Anderson
Henrietta Buist Anderson (Barry)
Lula Somers Anderson
Mary Flora Anderson

EMMA HARRIET
ANDERSON DUNOVANT

Mrs. Dunovant is a member of the Edgefield Presbyterian Church, Edgefield, S. C., and for sixty years taught in the Sunday School there. She was one of the prime representatives in preparing and arranging material for the Anderson-Denny History and did much to assist in recording complete and accurate data on the line of David Anderson, oldest son of "Tyger Jim" and "Polly" Miller Anderson. She is at present past eighty-eight years of age and has continued to live at Edgefield.

A number of years ago Mrs. Dunovant paid tribute to "Maum Cotta", a faithful slave who served in the family home in Greenville, S. C. As an appreciation to Maum Cotta, she created a miniature hickory-nut and cotton mammy doll which was distributed widely together with a printed pamphlet outlining Cotta's background and life. It seems that she was the daughter of an African Chief, was snatched away from the tribe, and landed in the slave market at Charleston, S. C. Later she was purchased by the family and was presented to one of the daughters as a maid. The faithfulness and devotion of Cotta to her mistress and her deep religious sense made her a person of honor and respect among the family of Mrs. Dunovant's maternal grandparents.

At the Anderson reunion in 1939 Mrs. Dunovant presented "A Toast to the Anderson Clan", which she had composed in poetic form. After the reunion, the toast was printed and distributed among members of the family.

She was married December 4, 1888, to William Lowndes Dunovant and came to live in the ancestral Dunovant home at Edgefield. Mr. Dunovant was born at "Roselands" near Ninety Six, S. C., February 17, 1860, the son of Robert Gill Mill Dunovant and Ellen Sophia Brooks. He received his education in the schools of Edgefield, read law for some time, and was admitted to the S. C. bar but never engaged in private practice. As a young man he was a railway postal clerk on the Charleston and Western Carolina Railroad between Augusta, Georgia, and Spartanburg, S. C. In 1890 Mr. Dunovant returned to Edgefield and throughout the balance of his life operated a general merchandise store there. He was a member of the Edgefield Presbyterian Church, served as an elder, as superintendent of the Sunday School, and taught the Adult Bible Class for many years. His later years were spent in ill health and he died in Edgefield, October 23, 1932. He was buried in Willowbrook Cemetery in Edgefield.

EDWARD HORNBY ANDERSON was born March 17, 1868, at "Plain Dealing" in Spartanburg County, S. C., the son of John Crawford Anderson and Emma Buist.

EDWARD HORNBY
ANDERSON

From his early youth he was somewhat slow in his development and made no rapid progress in his books. His early education was received in the school at Reidville and he entered the University of South Carolina, Columbia. He went through the first two classes, but was unable to rise to a junior and remained home for a year, working at the post office in Spartanburg and on his father's farm and vineyard at Moore. One day his uncle, Col. Thomas John Moore, saw him hard at work and commented to him that it was an outrage for a boy, whose great-grandfather was a D.D. before he was twenty-four years of age, and whose grandfather was a D.D. at an early age, to be making his living by his muscle instead of his brain. Taking his uncle's advice he went back to the University of S. C. and was permitted to enter the junior class. Shortly before his graduation, Mr. Isaac Means, the librarian, commented, "Mr. Anderson comes in here and gets the most abstruse books on the steam engine and electricity, and pores over them with the greatest of interest." He graduated from the University of S. C. in electrical and civil engineering in 1891.

Immediately after finishing school he went to Birmingham, Ala., and worked with the electrical street railway starting at the bottom as a common laborer erecting telegraph poles. His qualifications were soon noted there and a salary adequate to compensate him was offered, but just at this time his father died, and he came home to Moore, S. C. to take charge of his father's estate, which was somewhat involved.

Like so many men who begin farming with bright hopes and expectations, he soon learned that farming was not his calling. Through the influence of one of his kinfolk, Capt. John H. Montgomery, he secured an appointment to the General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y., which gave a two-year course to graduates of certain reputable colleges, with a degree in civil engineering. He went to Schenectady in 1894 and finished the course in one year. At the end of the first year he accomplished a job that none of the engineers had so far mastered, that of remedying the loss of power between the point of generation and its application. He was put immediately on a salary without the second year's course.

After several years with General Electric Co. a firm in Milwaukee offered him a position to take charge of a six- or seven-million-dollar plant at a handsome increase in pay. General Electric Co., desiring to retain his services, asked what salary would be necessary to prevent his leaving. Upon being told, they said this was more than they paid their superintendent. It was finally agreed that he would receive the same salary as the general superintendent and a present of several thousand dollars would be made to him at the end of each year.

When he had been with the company for two years he was made Designing Engineer of street railway motors. For the next several years he did much research work for the company and as result he was called into consultation on nearly all technical questions concerning the design of railway motors, even from a small automobile motor to the very large locomotive motors.

Aside from many interesting technical discussions on electrical matters before various engineering societies, he was called upon to design motors to replace the steam engine on elevated railway tracks. One incident may be reported in detail to set forth his ability in the electrical field. The Manhattan Elevated Railway Co. in New York decided to replace the steam engines on one system with electric motor cars. Mr. Anderson was assigned to examine the service, which consisted of many tons pulled along the system so many miles in a given time. From this it was necessary to design a motor which would do the work. The railway company had previously determined that the motors should be of a certain general design, there being two to the car, each motor not to weigh over 4300 pounds. He designed the motor, had the drawings made and built a sample all on a competitive basis. A corps of engineers spent about two months completely testing and weighing it, finding the weight to be 4296 pounds, and it was on their approval and report that the General Electric Company obtained the contract for the entire equipment, amounting to several million dollars.

Major installations of his motors were made on elevated and surface lines in Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia, beside many others in major cities of the country. It was not long before the motors of his design were operating in many foreign countries such as England, France, Palestine, Japan, South Africa, Russia and Australia. Seeing the economy and usefulness of electrical equipment, the New York Central Railway, entering New York City from the north, equipped its entire system with electrical locomotives for which the motors were designed by Mr. Anderson.

He suffered several strokes of paralysis and was ill for a year before he died at the age of 44 in Schenectady, March 30, 1912. The company out of its high esteem for him and his work continued his salary during the year of illness and after he died furnished the casket, paid the burial expenses, and sent an escort with the body which was buried in the Nazareth Cemetery, Spartanburg County, S. C.

He was married December 3, 1896, just two years after he became associated with the General Electric Company and soon built a home in Schenectady. His wife, the former Mary Elvira Anderson, was born in Anderson County, S. C., March 5, 1869, the daughter of Robert Quinton Anderson and Frances Louise Smith. She was one of eleven children in the family, received her elementary education in the home from a private teacher employed by the family and graduated from Winthrop College in 1892 when it was located at Columbia, S. C. She took a two-year special course in art at Converse College during 1893 and 1894. From 1892 to 1896 she was a teacher in the public schools of Spartanburg, S. C. Mrs. Anderson was a member of the Presbyterian Church and continued to live in the family home at Schenectady, N. Y., until her death May 6, 1955. DAVID BUIST ANDERSON without an orchard of from 15 to 20 acres.

He believed that the success of the farmer lay in a diversified agriculture rather than the old "one crop" system that had been followed for many years and he practiced diversification throughout his lifetime. In addition to his orchard, he operated a dairy to insure a steady farm income, along with growing cotton, grains, etc., and he also operated a cotton gin for many years. He was one of the first farmers in the county to recognize the value of farm machinery to combat the high cost of labor and mule power, and in 1919 bought his first farm tractor.

His farming operations became involved in the early years of the depression during 1929 to 1932 and he suffered complete financial loss even to the ancestral plantation which had been in the family for many years, containing the family cemetery and the graves of William Anderson and his wife, Rebecca Denny, the first of his Anderson line to settle in America. With the loss of his place, he arranged finances and purchased a smaller farm near Roebuck, S. C., nearer to Spartanburg. With the aid of other than farm income, he was able to reestablish himself and later repurchased, with his son John, the old homeplace, "Plain Dealing" which property he held at the time of his death.

During the early 1930's he became interested in the Grange, a national farm organization, which at that time was being reorganized in South Carolina. He was elected its first State Master, an honor he held for the next eleven years. During this time he promoted the Grange throughout the state so that it became a foremost farmer's organization. He was also instrumental in organizing and founding the Grange Mutual Fire Insurance Company of South Carolina which provided low-cost fire insurance to Grange members. Later he was elected Secretary-Treasurer of the fire insurance company and did not offer for reelection as State Master. Mr. Anderson promoted the interest of the fire insurance company until his death.

He was from the time of a young lad an ardent Presbyterian. For over thirty years he was an elder in the Reidville Presbyterian Church and was the Clerk of the Session. Throughout this time he taught in the Sunday School in the adult and young adult classes, was a gifted speaker and gave freely of his time and resources to the work of the church and other humanitarian organizations.

He died on his farm near Roebuck of a heart attack on June 19, 1947, and was buried in the Nazareth Presbyterian Church Cemetery.

On January 29, 1913, he was married to Teresa Dorinda Hollingsworth. She was born December 11, 1881, in Buncombe County, North Carolina. She is the daughter of Allen Alexander Hollingsworth and Amanda Adaline Carver. She was quite a young girl when her mother died and went to live in the home of Joseph and Josephine Lee Burgin at Horse Shoe, near Hendersonville, N. C. During 1912 she came to Spartanburg and took nurse's training at what was then the Good Samaritan Hospital. It was while nursing Mrs. Emma Buist Anderson, mother of David Buist Anderson, that she met him and they were married.

Shortly after marriage she had her church letter transferred from the Mills River Presbyterian Church at Horse Shoe, N. C., to the Reidville Presbyterian Church where she has been an active member ever since. In earlier years she was an active teacher in the Sunday School and has always been active in the women's work. Mrs. Anderson now lives near Roebuck on the farm which she and her husband purchased and moved to in 1932.

To this family were born four children:

Edward Lee Anderson
David Buist Anderson, Jr.
John Crawford Anderson
James Alexander Anderson

EDWARD LEE ANDERSON was born at "Plain Dealing" in Spartanburg County, S. C., November 28, 1913. He was born on the same tract of land which had been in the Anderson family since it was first settled by his ancestor, William Anderson, and his wife, Rebecca Denny. He is the son of David Buist Anderson and Teresa Dorinda Hollingsworth, received his early education in the Poplar Springs School and graduated from Spartanburg High School, Spartanburg, S. C., in the class of 1932. He attended Wofford College at Spartanburg during 1933 after which he became associated with the S. C. State Grange and traveled throughout the state promoting its interests with his father who was State Master of the organization at that time.

In 1935 he became associated with the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture in the Soil Conservation Service and worked in Spartanburg, Newberry and Columbia, S. C. He joined Columbia Supply Company in the accounting field during September, 1943, and at present is one of its directors and holds the office of Secretary. He is also a member of the Board of Directors and is Secretary of Charleston Supply Company and Southeastern Steel Company both in Charleston, S. C., of Mill & Contractors Supply Company, Wilmington, N. C., Matthews-Morse Sales Company, Charlotte, N. C., and Augusta Mill Supply Company, Augusta, Ga. He is a member of the Columbia Executives Club and the Columbia Chamber of Commerce.

As a small boy he united with the Reidville Presbyterian Church in his home community and several years after marriage his letter was moved to the First Presbyterian Church, Spartanburg, where he taught junior boys in the Sunday School. Upon moving to Columbia in 1942, his letter was transferred to the Shandon Presbyterian Church of which he is now a member. He has served as a Presbyterian deacon, elder, clerk of Session and Sunday School superintendent and was the first president of the couples' class in the Shandon Sunday School.

He has continually taken an interest in the Anderson family records and is responsible for having moved the graves of all the Andersons who were buried in the family cemetery at "Plain Dealing". When this property passed out of the Anderson family, there was much interest in moving these graves to Nazareth where the Andersons from the third generation on were buried. Those graves which were moved at this time in 1938 were as follows: William Anderson and his wife Rebecca Denny; David Anderson and his wife Miriam Mayson; Rebecca Anderson and Sarah Anderson Breakin who were daughters of William Anderson; Henrietta Miriam Anderson Chamblin, who was the daughter of David Anderson, and her husband, James Chamblin; Mary Chamblin, an infant; Thomas T. Hawkins, husband of Maria Chamblin. Each of these graves had been previously marked with tall stone markers which were transferred with the graves and set in concrete at the head of each. They were placed in the family plot on which the family of John Crawford Anderson is buried.

During 1938-39 he compiled and distributed to many of the Anderson descendants a family chart setting forth in diagram form the Anderson Family Tree beginning with William Anderson and tracing through 1938 each person bearing the name of Anderson as descendants of the original William.

With the help of his cousin David Watson Anderson and his father David Buist Anderson he was responsible for holding the Anderson Reunion at Nazareth on August 26, 1939, which was attended by the descendants of James Mason Anderson and Mary "Polly" Miller. Interest was expressed then for publishing a new Anderson History, however, nothing definite came of it then.

He and his brother John Crawford Anderson were responsible for holding the Anderson Family Reunion at Nazareth on August 21, 1954, just 15 years after the one previously held. At that reunion he presented plans and arrangements with the offer to gather the material and publish a new history of the family. He was elected chairman of the committee to write and publish this new history and it was largely through his efforts and cooperation from the many descendants of James Mason Anderson that this volume was made possible.

He was married December 26, 1935 to Elizabeth Jane Wyse. She was born in Columbia, December 18, 1915, the daughter of Frederick Calhoun Wyse and Elizabeth Jane Hennies. She received her early education in Columbia and moved with her family to Spartanburg in 1923 where her father was a civil engineer in the construction of the Pacific Mills plant at Lyman. She attended the schools of Spartanburg and moved with her family to Mississippi for her senior year. She graduated from the Duncan Consolidated High School in Duncan, Mississippi, in the class of 1933.

As a child, she united with the Women's Memorial Lutheran Church, Spartanburg, and transferred with her husband to the First Presbyterian Church in 1939. Upon moving to Columbia in 1942, she transferred to the Shandon Presbyterian Church of which she is now a member. Mrs. Anderson has served as circle chairman and devotional leader in the women's organization. She is at present a teacher in the Primary Department of the Sunday School and is president of her garden club.

They have four children:

Jeanne Buist Anderson—born April 21, 1939
David Frederick Anderson—born December 5, 1942
Elizabeth Wyse Anderson—born July 14, 1946
James Mayson Anderson—born April 14, 1949

DAVID BUIST ANDERSON, JR. was born May 20, 1916 at "Plain Dealing" in Spartanburg County, S. C. He received his early education in the Poplar Springs School, graduated from Spartanburg High School in the class of 1933, entered Wofford College in Spartanburg in the fall of that year and received his A.B. degree in 1937. He also received a commission in the reserves upon graduation from Wofford College and immediately volunteered for a year of active duty under the Thomason Act, serving this period at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas. Upon returning to South Carolina he taught school and affiliated with the South Carolina National Guard. In the fall of 1940, his unit was activated and he was stationed at Fort Jackson, Columbia, S. C.

In the spring of 1941, he resigned his commission and entered the Army Air Force as a training cadet. He received his flight training in Texas and was last stationed at Kelly Field, San Antonio. While on a routine training flight near Floresville, Texas, the engine of the plane which he was piloting, developed trouble and crashed in an open field on Christmas Eve night, December 24, 1941. His body was returned to South Carolina and was buried in Nazareth Cemetery. He was a member of the Reidville Presbyterian Church, Reidville, S. C.

JOHN CRAWFORD ANDERSON was born at "Plain Dealing" in Spartanburg County, S. C., November 16, 1918, the son of David Buist Anderson and Teresa Dorinda Hollingsworth. He, too, was born on the same tract of land where William Anderson and his family settled many generations before. He received his early education in the schools of Poplar Springs in his home community, graduated from Spartanburg High School in the class of 1935 and finished Wofford College in Spartanburg with an A.B. degree in 1939. He taught school at Duncan, S. C., for a year and became associated with the Farmers Cooperative Exchange in Charlotte. He was transferred later as manager of the store in Monroe, N. C. Having a commission in the Army reserves, he was called into service and spent five years in the U. S. Army during World War II. He was stationed at a number of training centers throughout the country including Louisiana, California, Pennsylvania and Kentucky and served with the 3rd Armored Division as a Captain in Europe. Mr. Anderson retains his reserve status at present. Upon receiving his discharge from the Army, he became associated with Commercial Credit Corp. in Greenville, S. C., and later worked in Spartanburg.

For the last eight years he has been manager of Roebuck Buildings Company, Roebuck, S. C., and is President of Carolina Steel Products Company also at Roebuck. He is an elder in the Reidville Presbyterian Church and is teacher of the men's Bible class.

He and his brother, Edward Lee Anderson, were responsible for holding the Anderson Family Reunion at Nazareth Church on August 21, 1954, where interest was created resulting in the publication of this volume.

Mr. Anderson was married February 2, 1946, at Reidville to Vivian Dean Brockman. She was born near Reidville April 5, 1924, the daughter of William Gary Brockman and Shirley May Yeargin. She received her high school education from the Woodruff High School, Woodruff, S. C., graduating in 1941, after which she entered Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C. She graduated there in 1945 with her degree in Home Economics and taught school for three years after graduation from college. She is a member of the Reidville Presbyterian Church and is secretary-treasurer of the women of the church.

They have the following children:

Elaine Vivian Anderson—born August 6, 1949

Jeannette Anderson—born July 21, 1952

John Crawford Anderson, Jr.—born April 2, 1955

JAMES ALEXANDER ANDERSON was born at Spartanburg, S. C., August 24, 1920, the son of David Buist Anderson and Teresa Dorinda Hollingsworth. He died of whooping cough and pneumonia September 20, 1920 and was buried in the family plot at Nazareth Cemetery in Spartanburg County.

MARY ELIZABETH ANDERSON MOORE

MARY ELIZABETH ANDERSON MOORE was born November 28, 1843, the daughter of Capt. David Anderson and Harriet Maria Brockman. She received her early education at Pine Grove Academy and later attended Laurensville Female Academy, then under the presidency of Dr. E. T. Buist, and graduated there in 1860. As the oldest daughter in the home and living during the unsettled years of the war, she learned many practical things which proved invaluable in later life. After her marriage, Mrs. Moore presided over the home "Fredonia" near Moore, which had been closed during the war except for the servants and the overseer. She was a member of the Center Point Presbyterian Church, Moore.

She was married February 27, 1866, to Col. Thomas John Moore, the ceremony having been performed by Rev. R. H. Reid. Thomas John Moore was the sole descendant of the original Charles Moore (1727) family by the name of Moore in South Carolina. He was born April 29, 1843, the son of Dr. Andrew Barry Moore (February 11, 1771) and his second wife Nancy Miller Montgomery (November 13, 1804). He was born and resided at "Fredonia", the ancestral home near

Moore, S. C., attended the neighborhood schools and studied at "Slabtown" under Rev. John L. Kennedy. While attending the South Carolina College, Columbia, he was called out twice, once, when the first gun was fired at Fort Sumter, and second when Port Royal fell. In his senior year, April, 1862, he left there permanently to and during 1899, he planted rice extensively and demonstrated that this crop could be grown successfully in the up-country of South Carolina. He was a member of the South Carolina House of Representatives from 1872-74 and was State Senator from 1880-84. He served for seventeen years as chairman of the State Board of Commissioners of the state institution for the deaf, dumb and blind and was elected again after that by the legislature as a member of that board. He was also for a number of years a member of the State Board of Agriculture, and in 1894-95 was president of the State Agricultural and Mechanical Society (State Fair) and for many years was a member of its executive committee.

Col. Moore was an elder in the Center Point Presbyterian Church at Moore and was the Superintendent of the Sunday School. Though a staunch supporter of that church, he did not like to go out to night services in his later years. It is said that on one occasion he was approached by the minister to attend the night services of that church. Col. Moore's reply was, “Preacher, it doesn't take as much preaching for me as it does for some people.”

In the early 1900's he had a rather unique experience of having received his college diploma approximately forty years after he had left the South Carolina College, Columbia, to enter the Civil War. The senior class of that institution, of which Col. Moore was a member, enlisted for service in the early part of 1862 and he was consequently prevented from graduating in June of that year. In the early 1900's, upon recommendation of the faculty, the board of trustees decided to award diplomas to the surviving members of the class of 1862. Col. Moore's son, Andrew Charles Moore, was a member of the faculty of the University of South Carolina and affixed his signature to his father's diploma.

Col. Moore died at the age of 76 on August 19, 1919, and Mrs. Moore died April 27, 1921 at the age of 77. They were both buried in the Nazareth Cemetery in Spartanburg County.

Eight children were born to them:

James Anderson Moore

enter the Confederate Army, in which he served as a private during the war, except when made color ensign of his regiment and carried the colors during the last battles. He first joined Company E, 18th S. C. Regiment, but afterwards became a member of Company A, Holcombe Legion.

After passing the winter in trenches at Petersburg, Va., he was captured at the battle of Five Forks, April 1, 1865, and was carried to prison on Johnson's Island, in Lake Erie, from which he was released June 16, 1865, when the war was over. He was never wounded or sick in a hospital. Upon returning to his home “Fredonia” he was engaged in farming operations for the balance of his life.

Not long after the close of the Civil War he was appointed a Colonel in the State Militia. He was always a progressive farmer

ANDREW CHARLES MOORE was born at "Fredonia", Spartanburg County, S. C., December 27, 1866, the son of Col. Thomas John Moore and Mary Elizabeth Anderson.

He attended the rural schools near his home, entered Reidville Male Academy, Reidville, S. C., and studied under Rev. B. P. Reid, noted minister and educator of his day. In 1883 he entered South Carolina College (now the University of South Carolina), Columbia, and graduated with an A.B. degree in the class of 1887. While a student at college he took an active interest in the community life of the college, and left behind him an enviable record both as a student and a man.

During the summer after his graduation he was elected superintendent of the city graded schools of Spartanburg and proved most successful as an administrator. As result of his success at Spartanburg, he was invited to organize and superintend the public schools at Camden, S. C., which position he held for the next two years. His success at Spartanburg and Camden attracted attention elsewhere and in 1890 he accepted a position as principal of the high school in Birmingham, Ala., where he served for the next eight years.

ANDREW CHARLES MOORE

Desiring to further his own development, he resigned his position in Birmingham in 1898 and enrolled as a graduate student at the University of Chicago for the 1898-99 session. The next year he was a Fellow in Biology and did exceptionally well to the extent that he was appointed one of the assistant instructors in botany. The South Carolina College officials watched his progress through the years since graduation and in 1900 he was elected Assistant Professor of Biology, Geology and Mineralogy and in 1904 was elected full professor of these subjects. During the summer of 1901 Mr. Moore did graduate work at the Marine Biological Laboratory at Wood's Hole, Mass., and the following year was one of the assistant instructors in that institution. In 1906 he was elected professor of Biology at the University of South Carolina.

At this point Mr. Moore had won for himself a reputation which recognized him as one of the ablest men of the faculty of the University and when Major Benjamin Sloan resigned as President of the University in 1908, Prof. Moore was elected by the Board of Trustees as Acting President for one year. In recognition of his success as acting president of the University, the Trustees of Wofford College, Spartanburg, conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws at the close of his administration. From 1909 until his death September 17, 1928, he was dean of the faculty of the University.

Upon the resignation of Dr. Mitchell, in June, 1913, the management of the University was again placed in his hands for a time.

He did not confine his activities to the routine work of the different positions he held, but took an active part in religious, educational and civic movements. While in Birmingham, he was an elder in the Central Presbyterian Church, and State Treasurer of the Alabama YMCA. From 1904 until his death he was an elder in the First Presbyterian Church, Columbia. In 1902 he was appointed a member of the Board of School Commissioners for the city of Columbia and was elected chairman of the board in 1906. In later years, the city school board built and named for him The A. C. Moore Grammer School in Columbia.

Dr. Moore was perhaps the only man in the history of education who enjoys the unique distinction of having signed a full college diploma for his own father. It seems that the senior class of the South Carolina College, of which his father was a member, enlisted for service in the War Between the States early in 1862 and was consequently prevented from graduating in June of that year. In the early 1900's, upon the recommendation of the faculty, the board of trustees decided to award diplomas to the surviving members of the class of 1862, and as Dr. Moore was at that time a member of the faculty of the University, he affixed his signature to the diploma of his father, Thomas John Moore.

There stands today on the Blossom Street portion of the University Campus the Moore Garden which is a living monument to his many years of valuable service to the University of South Carolina and the people of the Palmetto State.

He was married September 20, 1900, to Vivian May. She was born at Eastport, Hale County, Ala., July 1, 1869, the daughter of Milton M. May and Frances T. Kennedy. Being herself an educator and a woman of culture, she contributed much to Dr. Moore's success. She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, Columbia, for many years and died in Mobile, Ala., while on a visit there February 17, 1929, just six months after her husband.

Dr. and Mrs. Moore had no children and they are both buried in historic Nazareth Presbyterian Church Cemetery, Spartanburg County.

JAMES ANDERSON MOORE was born November 18, 1868, the son of Thomas John Moore and Mary Elizabeth Anderson. He died January 29, 1869, and was buried in the Nazareth Cemetery in Spartanburg County.

JUDGE JOHN CRAWFORD ANDERSON

JOHN CRAWFORD ANDERSON was born at "Burton's Hill", Greene County, Alabama, August 5, 1863, the son of Dr. John Crawford Anderson and Elizabeth McAlpine. He was educated in the Green County public schools and graduated with an LL.B. degree from the University of Alabama Law School at Tuscaloosa in 1883.

After serving nine years on the bench of the first judicial circuit, he was elected as an associate member of the Alabama Supreme Court in 1904. In 1914 he was appointed chief justice and never was defeated for re-election. He was known as conservative in his decisions although he was not without liberal leanings. His decisions were pithy and to the point. Veteran lawyers liked to have the chief justice write the decisions of their cases because his views were clearly outlined with a minimum of words.

Judge Anderson had an amazing memory, often astounding attorneys by discussing fully some case they had dug up from the musty volumes of the past to cite in their appeals.

His favorite story was the capture of Rube Burrows, notorious Alabama outlaw, at which he was an eye witness. A lifetime friend chided him with the story that when news spread that Burrows was in Linden, Judge Anderson jumped out of bed and put his trousers on backwards in his haste to flee town. "That's part truth and part lie", the chief justice said, in his high-pitched voice, "I did put my trousers on backwards, I was in such a hurry, but I was trying to help catch Rube, not run out of town."

He served twenty-seven years as chief justice, longer than any other man in the state's history and swore in six governors missing his first inauguration in 1939 because of illness. He was a deacon in the First Presbyterian Church of Montgomery.

Judge Anderson died of a heart attack in Montgomery, April 27, 1940, and was buried in Greenwood Cemetery at Montgomery.

ANNE MARY ANDERSON was born February 19, 1866 at Forkland, Alabama, the daughter of James Alexander Anderson and Rebecca Payne McLemore and was graduated from Tuscaloosa Female College, Tuscaloosa, Ala. She was never married, however, she lived a most active life until becoming an invalid in 1934. She lived with members of her family and spent her last days with her niece, Rebecca Thornton Nelson, in Birmingham, Ala., and Monteagle, Tenn. Miss Anderson was a charter member of the South Highland Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, and for a time was the oldest living charter member and the oldest member in age. At the age of eighty-two she was operated on for gangrenous appendix and recovered, however, she suffered many years with arthritis and died at the age of 87 at Monteagle, Tenn., June 27, 1953.

On July 4, 1953, the following editorial appeared in the San Francisco Chronicle entitled "She Made it Safe to Drive in the Rain":

"At the considerable age of 87, Miss Mary Anderson has gone to her reward at Monteagle, Tenn., and no matter how extravagant may sound the eulogies spoken over her, they will do her less than justice.

ANNE MARY ANDERSON

"For Miss Anderson was the inventor of the windshield wiper and there is no assaying the benefaction, spiritual as well as physical, that she bestowed upon motorized mankind by contriving her simple and obvious gadget. Her inspiration, it must be noted, was no selfish one, but came to her in a moment of pity; on a visit to New York City exactly 50 years ago, she became emotional over motormen who had to open their windows and court pneumonia in order to pilot their vehicles through a snow-storm. She dedicated herself to alleviating their hard lot and patented a manually operated blade 'to remove snow, ice or sleet' from the windows of street cars and other moving vehicles.

"Before Miss Anderson's flash of genius, the best brains of the automobile industry and the most ingenious devotees of motoring had tackled the problem and flubbed it. The best the engineers contrived was the split windshield—which would be swung open in the middle when rendered opaque by rain, snow or sleet, thereby providing a clear view and a dash of cold water in the face. The motorists, themselves, put their faith in a plug of tobacco or a half onion which, rubbed briskly over the windshield, theoretically imparted an oily film, which prevented droplets from collecting and thereby discouraged opacity. This had no appreciable effect on San Francisco fog, and the local motorist promoted visibility by stopping each block or so, getting out, and rubbing the clouded windshield with a rag. The damage to health and dispositions was incalculable.

"To Miss Anderson, as well as to the unidentified genius who first ran a white line down the middle of the road, the world owes more gratitude than it will ever show."

Upon returning from her trip to New York City and observing the conditions the motormen were undergoing, she made a model of the manually operated windshield wiper and had it patented. The wiper was never sold and she received not a penny for her efforts. It may be interesting to point out a letter which she received from a patent agent in Toronto, Canada in which he replied to her letter saying, "there is no future in the windshield wiper" and would not undertake the sale.

The Scientific American had an article on the windshield wiper which considered it an important invention. There were letters from people in Europe in foreign languages which went unanswered.

After her death, her neice, Mrs. Rebecca Thornton Nelson, received a letter from Dublin, Ireland asking for information on Mary Anderson and the invention for use in an article for the Automobile Trade Journal of Dublin, Ireland. The rights and patent expired after seventeen years.

NOTE: Due to the fact that only seven persons are descended from James Alexander Anderson, special exception has been made as to the publication of accompanying photographs of the adult members of this family. Pictures appear therefore of James Alexander Anderson and each adult descended from him.

For some years before the Confederate War, he was elected and commissioned by the Governor of South Carolina as captain of the Cashville Beat Company, which formed a part of the old 36th Regiment, South Carolina Militia, was afterwards elected and commissioned as major of the lower battalion of the regiment. He served seven years as an officer in the State militia, which, under the laws of the State at that time, exempted him from further service in it.

A few months before the beginning of the war, he enlisted in the Spartan Rifles (Capt. Joseph Walker), one of the first companies organized for the service, was made a sergeant in the company and left the county with the first troops for the war, serving during the first year in the 5th Regiment, South Carolina Volunteers (Col. Micah Jenkins). Upon the reorganization of the troops in Virginia in 1862, he became a member of Company A, Holcomb Legion (Col. P. F. Stephens). With the exception of two or three days he kept his health during the entire war, and was in every battle and skirmish in which his regiment was engaged and escaped without injury. While the siege of Petersburg was in progress, in the latter part of the war, during a fight, he planned a traverse on the picket line in front of the crater, where orders had been given to reverse the enemy's picket line and push it further back. This saved the lives of many in his company from fire of the enemy, while other companies, not having the benefit of a traverse, suffered heavily with many killed. The picket line at this time and place was under the command of Capt. A. B. Woodruff.

When Maj. Anderson was a young man, he affiliated himself with the Nazareth Presbyterian Church and was later ordained as an elder. He was often a delegate to meetings of presbytery and synod and on two occasions was a delegate to the General Assembly, the highest court of the church.

When Antioch Presbyterian Church was reorganized and moved to Reidville, S. C., he moved his membership from Nazareth and was one of the founders of the new church. He paid the salary of the first minister, Rev. Luther Link, who came from the state of Georgia. With Col. Thomas John Moore, he educated a young minister who served the Presbyterian Church upon completion of his training. With a hired carpenter and his farm labor, he built the Green Pond Baptist Church.

ROBERT REID ANDERSON

ROBERT REID ANDERSON was born at the Anderson homestead on the South Tyger River, Spartanburg County, July 29, 1872, the son of Franklin Leland Anderson and Ada Eppes. He had poor vision and was not able to attend school, however, his natural talent for music and playing the piano was one of his greatest pleasures. He was always around the home, was a constant aid to his mother and through the years took care of the milking and churning.

In 1889, he united with the Center Point Presbyterian Church at Moore, S. C., later transferring his membership to the Reidville Presbyterian Church. He was particularly fond of historic Nazareth Church and frequently walked there, a distance of six or seven miles, to put flowers on the graves of his family members.

His annual birthday celebration on July 29th, was always an occasion for a gathering of family and friends, which occasions continued until his death in his 79th year, April 16, 1951. After his mother's death in 1924, he was cared for by his sister, Henrietta Maria Anderson, and they continued to live at the homeplace, "Holly Hill", until it passed from the hands of the family, after which, they lived in a smaller place nearby. He was buried in the Nazareth Cemetery in Spartanburg County.

BENJAMIN MASON ANDERSON was born September 9, 1874 at his father's homestead on South Tyger River in Spartanburg County, S. C., the son of Franklin Leland Anderson and Ada Eppes. He received his education in the schools of Reidville, S. C., and at Webb School, Bell Buckle, Tenn. For three years he attended The Citadel at Charleston and was prevented from graduating due to the necessity for his taking over his father's farming interests, as Maj. Anderson had become quite feeble and was unable to attend to the matters of business.

BENJAMIN MASON
ANDERSON

As an agriculturalist, he was considered outstanding in the county due to his scientific farming and open-mindedness to progressive methods. He was also interested in community betterment and gave of his time and means to further those ends. He was a trustee of the Reidville schools and was a member of the Board of the Spartanburg General Hospital. Just before his death he assisted in locating the site for the present hospital plant. He was also a Mason.

Mr. Anderson was raised in the Nazareth Presbyterian Church, however, he transferred to the Reidville Church later, serving there as deacon, elder, superintendent of the Sunday School and as a teacher in the Sunday School.

He died at his home in the Reidville community September 13, 1918, one of the first victims of Influenza when the epidemic came to Spartanburg County and was buried in the family plot at Nazareth Church Cemetery.

in one room with grades one through nine all together. She served as president of the Spartanburg County Y. W. C. A. from 1919-20 and attended the national conventions during that time in New York City and Hot Springs, Ark.

Mrs. Anderson was raised in the Baptist Church, however, she united with the Reidville Presbyterian Church soon after her marriage. From 1905 to 1949 she taught in the Beginners, Primary and Junior departments of the Sunday School and since 1904 has been active in the work of the women's organization of the church. In 1908 she realized that many share-cropping families in the neighborhood were without Sunday School facilities nearby for their children and themselves. With the help of her husband, Andrew G. Bridwell and David Buist Anderson, she organized the "Neighborhood Sunday School" in one of the nearby farm buildings. Later a Sunday School building was erected on lands jointly held by B. M. Anderson and A. G. Bridwell and she continued to work in that organization until 1950.

She also conducted in her home, for a number of years, a "Parents Club" where she taught the mothers of the neighborhood in an effort to raise the standard of living and health among the share-cropping families.

When her husband died in 1918 and for many years afterward, she carried on farming operations, however, her son Benjamin Mason Anderson, Jr., returned to relieve her of this responsibility. She now spends part of her time at the Anderson homestead, with the balance divided among her daughters in Atlanta and Simpsonville, and with her sister in Clinton.

Six children were born to them:

C. on September 28, 1903, the son of John Henry Magill and Julia Dendy. His father joined the Confederate Army at the age of 15 as drummer boy and later was co-owner and editor of the Hartwell, Ga. Sun newspaper. Emil Perritt Magill received his early education in the public schools of Hartwell, Ga. and Richland, S. C. and graduated at Boys High School, Atlanta. It might be interesting to note that Mr. and Mrs. Magill at present own and occupy in the summer the main portion of the original house in which Tyger Jim Anderson and his family lived. The house was first built on the banks of Ben's Creek to be near the water, but later he wanted to be near the main road but did not have enough help in his family to move the house. He had at that time only two pigs for food and he asked his wife Polly Miller to cook one of them and he would invite the neighbors to help move the house and feed them. It was uphill all the way and by nightfall they were about half way to the road. Polly Miller cooked the other pig the next day and again the neighbors were invited to help move the rest of the way and eat again. For many years this house was near the present house place of "Holly Hill".

Major Franklin Leland Anderson, Tyger Jim's younger son, decided later to build the present "Holly Hill". He divided the rambling house into three parts. One part he gave to his son Thomas Moore Anderson who moved it across Ben's Creek, one part he gave to his son Walter Cary Anderson, which part is presently owned by Walter Cary Anderson, Jr., and the third part he gave to his son Benjamin Mason

Anderson. Each of these parts was moved to different locations. However, Benjamin Mason Anderson received the main portion of the house. This portion of the house and surrounding land was purchased by the Magills who use it for their summer place each year. There are now holes bored in the floor where the family had to shoot out in case of attacks by the Indians.

At that time the kitchens of houses were detached, and when the original house was split up, the kitchen remained where it still stands today.

James Chamblin

SARAH JAMISON CHAMBLIN MILLER was born November 5, 1806, the daughter of James Chamblin and Henrietta Miriam Anderson. She was married January 11, 1827 to Samuel Miller. He was born in 1781 and died May 4, 1846. She died February 22, 1881. Eight children were born to them.

DAVID CHAMBLIN was born June 24, 1813, the son of James Chamblin and Henrietta Miriam Anderson. He was married four times, the first to Margaret Pearson and to them were born two children. In February, 1844 he was married to Cinthia Darwin and four sons were born to them. Later in life he married Jane Corry and then Eliza Hunter.

SAMUEL CHAMBLIN, son of James Chamblin and Henrietta Miriam Anderson was married to Jane Boggs of Pickens, S. C., where they went to live. They had the following children: Sallie, Thomas, David, Henrietta, George and Callie.

WYATT LUTRELL CHAMBLIN, son of James Chamblin and Henrietta Miriam Anderson was married to Prudie Evans, and nothing is known of them.

JANE HERVEY CHAMBLIN KENNEDY was born in March, 1811, the daughter of James Chamblin and Henrietta Miriam Anderson. She was married November 12, 1829 to Rev. John Leland Kennedy. He was born December 12, 1801 and died August 19, 1877. She died July 22, 1858. He was a well known Presbyterian minister, who boarded in Mr. Chamblin's home and taught school at Poplar Springs. For many years he was pastor of Carmel Church, Pickens County, S. C. and taught the "Thalian Academy" at "Slabtown", which was widely attended by students from upper South Carolina. His boys were thoroughly prepared for college there, especially in Latin and Greek. He was married a second time, Aug. 2, 1859 to Mrs. E. D. Simpson, of Anderson District, by whom he had no children. Twelve children were born to the first marriage.

MARIA CHAMBLIN HAWKINS BAILEY, the daughter of James Chamblin and Henrietta Miriam Anderson was married to Thomas Hawkins and they lived in Greenville, S. C. He died early leaving a widow and three children: Nancy, Wyatt and Sarah. They all went to Texas and she afterwards married William Bailey.

WILLIAM CHAMBLIN, son of James Chamblin and Henrietta Miriam Anderson was married to Lucinda Drummond. He lived opposite his father's place, but soon moved to Panola County, Miss. They had five children: Augustus, Josephine, Leonidus, Sarah and Willie.

HENRIETTA CHAMBLIN MEADOWS, daughter of James Chamblin and Henrietta Miriam Anderson was married to James Meadows of Laurens County, S. C. and they moved to Texas. Three children were born to them: Willie, Lucy and John.

JAMES CHAMBLIN, son of James Chamblin and Henrietta Miriam Anderson was married to Caroline Hill and they went to Belton, Texas. Four children were born to them: Henrietta, John, James and Ida.

NOTE: Since this volume is primarily intended to trace the line of Andersons through James Mason "Tyger Jim" Anderson, mention has been made for Henrietta Miriam Anderson and her immediate descendants. In some instances all that is known for her descendants has been stated. In other cases a fuller history of the line may be found in the Anderson-Denny History published in 1914. No attempt has been made at this time to secure current information and the brief data shown above and taken from the Anderson-Denny History is to make clear the various lines so that anyone in the future who desires to tie in the line with that of William Anderson and his son David may have the benefit of establishing it to this point.

REBECCA ANDERSON

REBECCA ANDERSON was born in 1745 and died unmarried in 1830. She was the daughter of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny, the father of the Anderson line in this country. She was with her sister, Sarah Anderson Breakin, in Charleston, S. C., for a number of years, certainly during the siege of that city by the British. Later she lived with her sister on Ben's Creek, Spartanburg District. It was in this home that the late "Enoree" James Anderson boarded when he went to school at Poplar Springs in his early boyhood.

SARAH ANDERSON BREAKIN

SARAH ANDERSON BREAKIN was born in 1748, the daughter of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny. She was married to William Breakin or Brickin, "a distinguished ironworker and Free Mason". They lived in Charleston, S. C., where very probably they were married during the stay of William Anderson and his family there. They had two children, one of whom died in infancy during the siege of Charleston. Their son, William, married a daughter of William Massey and moved away from South Carolina with the Masseys and some of the Pattersons. Although he afterwards visited his relatives in South Carolina, nothing is known of his later history.

After the death of her husband, Sarah Anderson Breakin became matron of the Charleston Orphan Home. Inquiries made at this institution in 1911 failed to show proof of this fact, however it is confirmed in many other ways. Sarah Breakin, careful, aristocratic and probably arbitrary and domineering, boasted of having entertained George Washington, who did not accept invitations to private homes during his visit to South Carolina. Further, the first census of the United States, 1790, Charleston District, St. Phillips and St. Michael's Parish, shows that Sarah Breakin was the head of a family made up of "nine free white males under sixteen years of age, twelve free white females, including heads of families, and one slave."

"The Centennial Proceedings of the Charleston Orphan House," published in 1891, says, pp. 27-28:

"* * * that the very year in which they (the people of Charleston) emerged from the War of Independence, when the state in each part, and the city of Charleston in especial, had been wasted and desolated by the long and unequal struggle, the Legislative Act incorporating the city—procured at the instance of the citizens—devolved upon the new body corporate the duty of providing for the orphan poor. Under the act of 1783, the City Council appointed commissioners to carry out this provision. These commissioners gathered such orphans as were contemplated in this legislation, boarded them in private houses, under the care of selected ladies, and educated them in the city schools. * * *

"The 18th of October, 1790, the City Council passed the ordinance by which the present institution began to exist. * * *

"Under this ordinance suitable commissioners were appointed to carry out its provisions. By them a commodious building was hired from Miss Elizabeth Pinckney in Ellery, now Market Street, on or near the site of the present 'Sailors' Home'. Here were soon gathered and domesticated more than one hundred orphans. The early history of this asylum was marked by an event memorable and significant. George Washington, President of the United States, then upon his southern tour, visited the institution, expressed his pleasure at its existance, and invoked a blessing upon its inmates."

For a number of years preceding her death, Sarah Breakin kept house on Ben's Creek, not far from "Holly Hill", home of Maj. Franklin Leland Anderson and his father "Tyger Jim". Her spinster sister, Rebecca, and most likely her mother, also lived with her. After her sister's death in 1830, she broke up housekeeping, and boarded with relatives, spending most of her time in the home of her nephew, "Tyger Jim" Anderson, where she died February 18, 1846, at the age of ninety-eight.

HANNAH ANDERSON

HANNAH ANDERSON, daughter of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny, is said to have married a man with Indian as well as Anglo-Saxon blood in his veins. There is no record of her birth or death. The fact of her marriage to this man, seems to have estranged her from her family, and naturally so, when the English were staking a great deal on the struggle for supremacy in North America. Tradition makes her none the less proud and spirited than her sister, Sarah Anderson Breakin. According to the late Maj. William Hoy, who is supposed to have known more about the early history of his part of South Carolina than anyone else, she was living in what is now Spartanburg County when she lost her husband. All trace of her has been lost for eight generations.

DENNY ANDERSON

DENNY ANDERSON was born December 23, 1763, when his mother was fifty-three years of age, the son of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny. He was born in what is now Laurens County, S. C., and was the ancestor of "Enoree" James Anderson. Not much is known of his boyhood. He is said to have killed an Indian chief in self-defense. He was pursued by Indians and escaped their fury only by jumping into a hole by a large uprooted stump. A snake ran in ahead of him to its den, however, he chose the foes within and rolled the stump over him.

Although but a boy, Denny Anderson was a member of Capt. Andrew Barry's Company, and became "a noted soldier of the Revolution". He was in the scrape when Patrick Crawford was killed, and fired his gun at a man (Mucklewrath) behind a tree. So skilled a marksman was he that he grazed the bark and brought blood from the man, who afterwards proved not be an enemy but his friend. He was in a skirmish with a party of Georgia Tories, and wounded the major's horse. He was at the siege of Ninety Six, and shot a noted character in the fort, who showed himself on the wall, and as he was never seen again, it is supposed that he killed him. He was at the siege of Augusta, and at many other places. He pointed out the tree to Sam Burnett behind which Patrick Crawford was killed (on the George Burnett place between Green Pond and Cashville), at which place Crawford's grandson has erected a monument."

In spite of the fact that at the time when a young man should be in school, Denny Anderson was fighting for the freedom of his country, he became a man of influence. Specimens of his writing indicate that he was a person of education which he may have received in Charleston. He was a justice of the peace and a ruling elder in Nazareth Presbyterian Church, of which he was a member for forty years. He and his family would ride from his home on the Enoree River to Nazareth, a distance of thirteen or fourteen miles, so as to attend church. While not a man of great means, he was able to establish his children comfortably in life, and he gave the land on which Old Antioch Church, near Cashville, stands. Like his brother, David, he was fond of hunting and trapping, and he spent weeks at a time in his woods.

Denny Anderson was married August 4, 1784 to Elizabeth Massey, who at the time of marriage was only fifteen years of age. She was born June 19, 1769, daughter of William Massey and a former Miss Smith. Tradition says they were a Welsh family from Halifax, N. C.

Elizabeth Massey was an energetic and efficient woman, of a little above medium height, and weighed about one hundred and seventy pounds. During the thirteen years of her widowhood she lived near her son, James, on the Enoree River. She spent much time visiting her children, going often on foot, for the distances were not too great. At each home, live business woman that she was, she would tell how the other sons and sons-in-law were managing to keep a little more than even with the world. Those of the present day who have not heard detailed accounts of these visits of "Grandmother Anderson" have missed much of acute interest. Later in life she developed hydrothorax, and was taken to the mineral waters of what is now Reidville, S. C. Growing suddenly worse there, she was carried on a bed in a spring wagon to the home of her daughter, Elizabeth Leonard, near Sharon Church. Here she died, July 21, 1845. The late James Denny Leonard, her grandson, then a child about three years of age, carried all his life a vivid mental picture of her last hours. A neat marble tombstone marks where she is buried in the old Massey-Anderson Cemetery, a mile west of Old Antioch. Here on another tombstone by its side, appears this inscription:

"Sacred to the memory of Denny Anderson, Esqr. He was born the 23rd of Dec., 1763, and departed this life Dec. 19, 1832. He was a member of Presbyterian Church 40 yrs, and so conducted himself as never to be called to account for any offence either in church or state. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord; yea saith the spirit, they do rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

Denny Anderson and Elizabeth Massey had twelve children:

Rebecca Anderson (Bennett)

William Anderson

David Anderson

John Anderson

Denny Anderson

Mary Anderson (Leonard)
James Anderson
Samuel Anderson
Henry Anderson
Elizabeth Anderson (Leonard)
Martha Anderson (Bennett)
Sarah Anderson

Rebecca, William, David, Samuel, Henry, Martha and Sarah are buried in the Massey-Anderson Cemetery, where their parents, their great-grandmother Smith and other relatives were buried. John is buried in the Fairview Church Cemetery in Greenville County. Denny, Mary and James are buried in Old Antioch Cemetery. Elizabeth is buried in the Sharon Church Cemetery, near Reidville, which church she took an active part in founding.

NOTE: No further effort to set forth information is being made in this volume, since the main purpose in these writings is to trace the Anderson lines through James Mason Anderson, "Tyger Jim". It has been the purpose in these last several pages to set forth enough information to tie in the children of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny as brothers and sisters of David Anderson, father of "Tyger Jim". Complete reference information for these lines up to 1914 may be found in the Anderson-Denny History which was published at that time.

AS A MATTER OF RECORD

In the lines that follow will be found an exact re-print of the record from the Anderson-Denny History, published in 1914, which sets forth the work of the historians that made that volume possible. Had it not been for the publication of that volume, there is serious doubt as to even the most remote possibilities of so complete a record of the Anderson family as it appears today. The work of this group of untiring historians is cherished by each member of these families.

The purpose in reprinting these lines is to give future generations an insight into the past history of the family and to set forth the efforts of these historians in trying to connect the family of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny with the records in Pennsylvania, Scotland and Ireland. The present and all future generations of Andersons are deeply indebted to them for their labors and we propose that these records of their efforts shall be preserved.

FOREWORD

(From the Anderson-Denny History)

Ten years have elapsed since Mrs. Margaret Anderson Boyd began systematically to collect material for a genealogy of the William Anderson-Rebecca Denny family. The first general "Reunion" of the family at Old Antioch Church in 1906 resolved itself into the Anderson Memorial Association, and this body has tried to further the work of Mrs. Boyd. In her efforts to trace her ancestry in the Old Country, she has been materially aided by several persons. Special mention should be made of Mrs. E. J. McCrum, an historian of note, Ballyvesey, Carnmoney, Ireland, for advertising in the British Antiquarian Society and sending the names of ministers in Downs and Antrim who might be able to give information as to church records; of Mr. Arthur Douglas Denny, Comeragh View, John's Hill, Waterford, Ireland, for the care and interest he has given to her researches, having shared her enthusiasm and reached the conclusion that their lines were the same; of the Rev. H. L. L. Denny, of London, for sending his genealogy; of Mr. William Denny, of Dumbarton, Scotland, for sending his genealogy (dating back to 1700, as does hers).

Miss Harriet M. Moore has compiled and edited the material covering the senior branches of the family—those of John and David.

In the case of the junior line, that of Denny Anderson, Sr., effort has been made to include every member. As with many another would-be family historian the collection of such material has been disappointing. In some cases it has been exceedingly difficult to get the simplest facts—even "a date would be too much or rather too small to write about." To certain of the family, however, much is due in the way of positive assistance, and to such, generous thanks are accorded. Among these are Miss Att Anderson, Miss Eula Eugenia Anderson, Mr. Earle W. Brockman, Mr. Joseph W. Wood and Mrs. Ila Leonard Willson—but for the invaluable help of the last named the work would never have reached even this unsatisfactory shape.

The thanks of the entire Association are due James W. Anderson for financing the publication of the genealogy.

INTRODUCTION

(From the Anderson-Denny History)

It is a matter of profound regret that no original records have been found throwing light on the ancestry and collateral relationship of William Anderson and Rebecca Denny. The Anderson Memorial Association has undertaken considerable correspondence and investigation with only meager definite results. To facilitate the efforts of the future historian of the family some of these results—the work of two competent Pennsylvania genealogists, John R. Miller and Mrs. A. H. Watts—are here inserted.

"More fully to understand, I will preface my report with the explanation that I find William Andersons in the three counties of Cumberland, Franklin and Perry, originally all embraced in Cumberland. Franklin County was stricken off from Cumberland 9th of September, 1784, and Perry 22nd of March, 1820. Cumberland was erected into a county January 8th, 1750. The records of Franklin and Perry prior to their separation are here.

In making up this report I do so in a desultory way, giving you everything I can find touching Andersons without attempting to knit it together, leaving it to you to fit it with what you have.

As I have before stated, I find several William Andersons. In Deed Book "C", page 58, William Anderson, of Tuscarora (Perry, 60), on the 6th of April, 1763, conveys 150 acres in West Pennsboro (Cumberland) to George Armstrong, of Carlisle; no wife joined in the deed.

In Deed Book "F", page 241, on April 9th, 1781, William Anderson and Margaret his wife, of Tobine (Perry), conveys 200 acres to William Campbell, of the same place.

In Deed Book "K", page 603, January 16th, 1794, William Anderson and Mary, his wife, of Carlisle (Cumberland), conveys a lot in Carlisle to Archibald Louden, of same place.

In Deed Book "V", page 619, April 5th, 1807, William Anderson and Isabella, his wife, of Tobine (Perry), conveys to Jacon Shelly, of Allen (Cumberland), 298 acres in Tyrone.

In Deed Book "D", page 213, February 23d, 1765, William Anderson and John Brookie, of Guilford (Franklin), cabinet makers, conveyed to James Elliott, merchant, lot No. 5 in Chambersburg. In this deed William Anderson's son, John, is a witness; in this deed no wife is joined.

In Deed Book "A2", page 118, December 1st, 1761, Ezekiel Smith, sheriff, on an execution he held against William Anderson, sold to William Maclany a tract of 100 acres in Guilford (Franklin), situated on both sides of the Connocoquique Creek, at the place called Douglass Meadows, which tract had been warranted to William Anderson, 28th of May, 1753, and also a tract of 400 acres at the headwaters of the Antietam Creek in Antrim (Franklin).

In Book "E", page 28, April 20, 1753, William Anderson buys from Ezekiel Dunning, sheriff, a tract of 215 acres in Guilford (Franklin), sold as property of James Cavin, bounded by Benj. Gass, William Nugent and vacant lands.

On the above deed on the 8th of October, 1754, William Anderson and Rebecca, his wife, executed a transfer of it to Patrick and John Vance and on this deed John Anderson is a witness, and it is recited that John is the son of William Anderson.

It is the last named William Anderson we are after, for the townships of Antrim and Guilford are in the Connocoquique country and we have his wife's name established in the foregoing deed as Rebecca. Now, then, to connect her with the Dennys, in an historical article written by Mr. J. Zemer, he states that Robert Denny had a daughter, Rebecca, who married an Anderson. I have been unable to find his authority for this statement, but he is a very accurate historian and I know he would not so state without the fact before him, but we have confirmatory evidence in Robert Denny's will.

Robert Denny's will, recorded in Will Book "D", page 238, dated September 1, 1784, is as follows: Gives his wife, Jean, one-third of his estate and makes various bequests of money as follows: to his grandson, Robert Anderson, and to his granddaughter, Nancy Anderson, when they became of age, gives granddaughters, Elizabeth and Jean Jackson, sums of money, gives to his granddaughters, Elizabeth and Jean Parks, gives his grandson, William Parkinson, gives his granddaughters, Elizabeth and Jean Teetson, gives his grandson, Robert Keer, and to his grandchildren, Robert and Mary Rutledge, and makes a bequest to the Rev. Samuel Waugh, a Presbyterian clergyman, at Silver Spring Church. James Bell and William Denny were the executors named in the will.

As I have it, there were three brothers, of the Dennys who came to Cumberland County, presumably from Chester, viz: Robert, John and William. William settles in Carlisle, John, it appears, in West Pennsboro in 1762, and Robert contemporaneously settled in East Pennsboro on a farm, now owned by a man by the name of Delone, of Harrisburg, Pa., located along the C.V.R.R., about four miles east of Carlisle; he is assessed regularly along until 1784. Robert made his will September 1, 1784, which was probated 23d of November, 1784, so he died between those dates, likely about the middle of November.

The history of the Denny family is very elaborate as they were active men in the early history of this country. Prof. Himes, of Dickinson College, who is married to a descendant of the Dennys, refers me to a book, not available here, called Eagles—Parker Denny and other families. You will find it in the Congressional Library when you go to Washington or it is in the Pennsylvania State Library. He also tells me that Thomas Brereton, of Chambersburg, Pa., has given the Denny family much study.

The following is fragmentary material I have run across: Fort Anderson was located near the junction of Shavers Creek and the Juniatta River, near where now stands the Borough of Petersburg; this is in Huntington County.

In Eagle's Notes and Queries, Vol. 1-3 Series, page 380: Rev. James Anderson b. in Scotland, November 17th, 1678, was called to Donegal Church (Lancaster Co.) 24th of September, 1726, he m. a Miss Garland, daughter of Sylverter Garland, m. 2d Rachel Wilson, December 27th, 1737. His son, Garland, m. Jane, daughter of Peter Chervalier of Philadelphia; his daughter, Elizabeth, m. Samuel Breeze, of N. Y. He had a brother, John, of Perth Amboy.

In Eagle's Notes and Queries, Vol. 3, 3d Series, page 58: Captain Patrick Anderson, born February 24, 1719, was the first child born of American parentage at Phoenixville, Chester County, Pa.; his father was James Anderson, a Scotchman, his mother, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Jerman, a noted Quaker preacher in Chester, owned a farm on Pickering Creek two miles from Valley Forge and there built a mill. He was with Anthony Wayne, one of the Chester County Committee. Was the ranking captain in the Continental Army when the British Army passed through Chester in 1777.

In Pennsylvania Archives, Vol. 5, page 27, is a letter from Patrick Anderson to the Authorities on the state of the army September 22d, 1776, after defeat on Long Island.

In Pennsylvania Archives, Vol. 9, page 175, is a return made of the provisions to the Third Pennsylvania Regiment by Thomas Anderson.

In Eagle's Notes and Queries, Vol. 1, Series 4, page 66, states that Sallie Hastings, the poetess, was a daughter of Robert Anderson of Donegal (Lancaster). This was an interesting lady. I have a copy of a book she wrote in 1801 giving an account of a trip she took from Donegal to Washington County, a distance of about 250 miles; the book also contains a number of her poems. This same note gives names in 1785 of Brice Clark and Margaret, his wife, late Anderson David Houston and William Brisben, administrators of Robert Anderson of Lecock (Lancaster County).

Robert's widow married Brice Clark, who owned a farm (now owned by Senator Cameron) in Donegal (Lancaster County).

In Eagle's Notes and Queries, Vol. 3, Series 3, page 269: Henry Anderson, of Peters township (Franklin County—this is in the Connocoquie settlement), died October, 1778. Wife's name was Ann. His devisees were his brother John's children: viz: Allen, Elizabeth, John and Rebecca. His brother, Thomas, now, in Ireland; sister, Mary Disart, now in Ireland; Rev. John Rogers, Wm. Anderson, a son of a kinsman; Oliver Anderson and his second son, Henry.

In the same book, page 367, James Anderson, of Glassbough, Ireland, married 1732 Janet Bell, daughter of Walter Bell.

Eagle's Notes and Queries, Vol. 2, Series 3, page 257: Margery Denny, widow of Walter Denny, of Little Britain, Lancaster County, died 1761. She has daughters, Sarah, married John Evans; Ann, married Robert McQuestern; and Margery, married David Dunning. This is not the widow of Captain Walter Denny, of Carlisle, son of William, who was killed at the battle of the Crooked Billet.

One of the halls at Dickinson College is called "Denny Hall"; it is built upon the ground of the old homestead of William Denny, which was presented to the college by the Denny family of Pittsburgh.

Aside from the will of Robert Denny, in the settlement of his estate, the records here show but very little. The settlement was long drawn out; although he died in 1784, it was not until September 16th, 1793, that his surviving executor, James Bell, came into court, as shown in Orphan's Court, Docket No. 3, page 122, with an account of his personal estate, showing a balance in his hands of £ 18, 15 shillings and 10 pence.

In Deed Book "S", page 234, Thomas Bell and Thomas Williams, administrators, with the will annexed, on the 3d of May, 1808 (the executors in the meantime having both died), conveyed to Thomas Uriel descendants' farm in East Pennsboro, containing 146 acres and 10 perches for the consideration of $4,152.50.

In Orphan's Court, Docket No. 5, page 53, on February 13th, 1810, Thomas Williams and Thomas Bell came into Court with a final settlement of their accounts, showing a balance in their hands of $2,302.89.

In Will Book "C", page 120, is the will of Henry Anderson, of Peters township (Franklin), dated 7th of May, 1775, probated 23d of October, 1778, wherein he gives his wife, Ann, one-half of his estate (he seemed to have no children), and makes the following directions: that if his wife desires to clear off any of the land she shall not clear more than a turnip patch each season, and if the land should be sold, not to be sold to either the Dutch or the Quakers. He gives to Allen Anderson, oldest son of his brother, John, five shillings; gives Elizabeth, John and Rebecca, his children each £ 30; gives sister, Mary Disart, widow in Ireland, five shillings, and to her two children (names unknown) each £ 30. Gives his brother, Thomas, in Ireland five shillings and to each of his three children (names unknown) £ 30.

Gives for the use of the Presbyterian congregation on the west side of the west branch of the Connocochique, under care of Associate Presbytery, £ 50. Gives Rev. John Rogers £ 10 if he accepts call to the Connocochique congregation. Here we have the church you are after, for Peters township is in the Connocochique country. Seilhamer can tell you whether it is still in existence. Gives his nephew, Henry Marshall, son of William Marshall, £ 15. Gives Henry Uray £ 10. Gives William Anderson, eldest son of his kinsman, Oliver Anderson, £ 10, and to his second son, Henry, £ 20, and to daughter, Janett, £ 10; gives Rachael Browning, an old servant girl, £ 3.

I have given you about all I have thus far been able to lay my hands on and I trust it will be satisfactory to you. To my mind it is manifest that Rebecca, the wife of William Anderson, was the daughter of Robert Denny, and was born in East Pennsboro township, Cumberland County, Pa. I could not find date of her birth or marriage. I enclose you several letters from George O. Seilhamer, of Chambersburg, Pa., with whom I corresponded touching this matter."

ANDERSON FAMILY—PENNSYLVANIA

(From the Anderson-Denny History)

Judge Chambers held court at William Anderson's. In those days the Orphans' Court was a sort of migratory thing, and was held at such points in the county as best suited the convenience of the inhabitants, and it was as liable to be held at the private residence of a citizen as at the established courthouse.

As to what penalty led to the sale of William Anderson's land by the sheriff, I would say that the sheriff seized upon these lands under an execution issued out of the court upon the foreclosure of a mortgage.

As to when William Anderson was last assessed, I cannot answer that, because some of our assessment lists have been lost, and it may be possible that he remained on these lands until 1784, when Franklin County was stricken off from Cumberland.

From the data given above I think there could be no question that William Anderson was married to Rebecca Denny, the daughter of Robert Denny, who was one of three brothers, who settled in the vicinity of Carlisle, and who are reputed to have come here from Chester. It is definitely established that William Anderson and Rebecca, his wife, sold lands to Patrick and John Vance in 1754, and their son, John, was a witness to the deed because it is so stated in the deed itself, and there was no age limit to establish his competency to become a witness to such deed.

I gave in my former communication everything I could find on the records here, and I have again made diligent search without being able to find anything additional.

JOHN R. MILLER

Chambersburg, Pa., April 6, 1909

My Dear Mr. Miller: I have given the Anderson matter all the attention it seems capable of in this county, and everything leads to the same result—no thoroughfare. Beyond the information you have there seems to be nothing concerning William Anderson. His lands in Greene Township comprised a long, narrow tract, containing 416 acres. It must have been situated about where the turnpike crosses the Connocoquiche, between Chambersburg and Greene village. The Vance tract in Guilford township was originally the property of the Rev. Samuel Caven, the first pastor of the Falling Spring Presbyterian Church. It is on the Falling Spring, about two miles southeast of Chambersburg, and adjoined the land of the parents of the famous horse thieves and highwaymen, the Nugents, whose mother was a sister of Col. Benjamin Chambers. Another Anderson, John, had a survey of lands in Greene township, in 1753, but what became of them you can trace better than I can, as the record is probably at Carlisle. John and William were apparently brothers, but both disappeared from the Connocoquiche Country at a very early period. One or the other of them may have been the father of Thomas Anderson, who was a member of Rockey Spring Church, and died about 1793. He had two sons, James and Robert, and four married daughters. There was a David Anderson, who was an early settler in Bedford County. The church records in this country are very imperfect.

G. O. SEILHAMER

Chambersburg, Pa., April 1, 1909

Dear Mr. Miller: The descriptions of the lands of William Anderson, bought at sheriff's sale by William Maclay, is impossible, as no part of Guilford township is, or ever was, on both sides of the Conocoquiche. On looking up the surveys, I find that Anderson's warrant was for lands on both sides of the creek, either above or below the present village of Scotland, in what is now Greene township. If the location of the lands is important for your purpose, I shall endeavor to locate them definitely. I believe that this William Anderson was identical with the William Anderson at whose house one of the very early courts of Cumberland County was held by Justice Benjamin Chambers and Associates.

G. O. SEILHAMER

Unlike the Dennys, who were few in numbers among the early settlers, the Andersons mustered a host in the settlements in Pennsylvania. Unfortunately for the seeker in ancestral lines, many of the names bore the same baptismal name, and without private family records it is difficult if not impossible, to trace the connection between families. Private records, old Bibles, etc., are hard to find; family "traditions" prove more and more faulty and unreliable, as years have passed and families have scattered. Scraps of "family records" are coming to light, and sent to county historical societies for publication, and, now and then, an old marriage record is found among old papers by descendants of some minister of early days, but these are but odds and ends of what is wanted and searched for. To take up Mrs. Boyd's questions, John Anderson, of Perth Amboy, and his brother, Rev. James Anderson, are said by historians to have been born in Scotland. You have in a former communication the names of children of John and the date of first marriage of James, which facts eliminate these two from the possible ancestry of William, your known ancestor. Capt. Patrick Anderson was the eldest son of James Anderson, Chester County. Deed Book "F", page 319: "This indenture, made the 11th December, 1740, between James Anderson, of Charlestown, Chester County, Pennsylvania, yeoman, and Patrick Anderson, eldest son of sd. James". Also Book "H2", page 322: "Patrick Anderson and Ann, his wife, to Isaac Anderson, eldest son of Patrick. From Philadelphia County Wills: John Anderson, flatman, of city of Philadelphia, to mother, Mary Woodside, wife of James Woodside, to brothers, Andrew, James, Jacob, and Isaac, to sisters, Anne Pingard and Mary Anderson, and bro-in-law, Isaac Jones, of New Jersey.—29th December, 1757—26th January, 1758". This is one of the earliest Anderson wills. It has no reference to

William, and I give it only as an item of interest, and because of the names in it and in the family of James and Patrick. The next will names a son, William, who has evidently gone to a remote part of the new country. Many old wills show that communications with members of a family had been cut off, causing uncertainty as to whether they were living. Will of Robert Anderson, late of the city of Philadelphia, yeoman, "to son William, if he be living, and ever personally appears to demand it," names the children, viz.: Robert, Andrew, William, and "son Thomas, with whom I now live." Date of will 24th July, 1758. None of the names in this will are in the family of your ancestor, and for other reasons, I believe this Robert Anderson is not the father of William, of Cumberland County. He was, I think, without doubt, an immigrant, and the first of your Anderson ancestors to come to America. There were probably others of his family with him. The following two wills may hold clues to William's belongings, and possibly, to his home in Ireland. From Chester County, Pennsylvania, Wills: Will of John Anderson (town not given) 9 September, 1758. "Lands in Cumberland County, near the West Branch of the Cushecola (?) to be sold & money from it and residue of all property to Mother Mary Anderson, if she be dead, then to sister Susannah—& her heirs". Executor, William Allen; one of witnesses, John Glascock. (The last name of sister, Susannah, I cannot decipher.) At probate of will witnesses declared that the descendant said his mother, Mary Anderson, lived in the Parish of Thomastown, county of Kilkenny, Ireland, and his sister lived there also. Will of Samuel Anderson, of Nottingham township, Chester County, date December 19, 1766, probated May 25, 1767: Wife, Agnes Anderson; sons, viz.: John, James, and Henry; daughters Rose Jameson, and Sarah Glascock; friend William Allen; executors, wife, Agnes, and son, John Anderson; one of witnesses, William Allen. William Allen named executor by one and friend by the other of these Andersons, and John Glascock, the husband of the daughter of Samuel, a witness to will of John, shows a near connection between the two, and near together in the neighborhood. John certainly came from Ireland, and these wills bear evidence of relationship between the two. The names of children in Samuel's family are same as in that of William, John, eldest son, and Sarah. The relationship of Samuel and John there is no way of proving, whether brothers, or uncle and nephew. What is certain is, both were immigrants, as was William. There are a number of William Andersons, referred to in wills, deeds, etc., in Chester and Lancaster Counties, but none of them could have been the man whose record we seek. All were too young, except the one named below. In a petition, signed by sundry inhabitants of Chester and Lancaster counties in 1736, is the name of William Anderson. At this time William Denny was in Chester County, in Uwchland township, that his brother-in-law, William Anderson, was also there, is a fact, for there is no other W. Anderson named in either Chester or Lancaster records at that time, i.e., so far as given of settlers in the archives of the State, and wills, etc., filed in county records. Just when William Anderson came to Cumberland County is not known. A William Anderson was a warrantee of land in Lancaster County in 1745. This is probably your man. Cumberland had not been formed into a county at that time, but was a part of Lancaster. William is in first tax lists of the new county, in West Pennsborough, in 1751; same year a John Anderson in Hopewell township; in 1753 William Anderson is in Antrim township; later in Guilford. In 1753 he bought at sheriff's sale, land in Guilford township, the property of James Craven. Mr. Miller notes that in his paper. On the transfer of the deed to Patrick and John Vance of above named property, John Anderson, son of William and Rebecca, is a witness; date of transfer October 8, 1754. Another witness was James Lindsey. The deed to Vance was recorded August 9, 1776, when Lindsey appeared before the justice and deposed that he saw William Anderson sign the deed, and also his wife, Rebecca, sign; that he saw John Anderson, son of said William, subscribe his name as a witness, and that he saw said William Anderson receive an horse in part of the consideration, etc. At this time, 1776, William Anderson, with his family was in South Carolina. In 1754, when this deed was signed, the son, John, approaching young manhood, I suppose. In the deed of sheriff's sale of property of William Anderson, noted in Mr. Miller's paper, the writ was issued 20th October, 1761; the date of deed to—McClay, 2nd December, 1761; sale to satisfy a debt of £ 192, 14 shillings, names William Anderson, late of Cumberland County; debt to John Kidd, lately of the same county, William Anderson, then in October, 1761, had removed from Cumberland; the deed states that the land in Guilford township was granted to William Anderson 28th May, 1753. The tract of 400 acres on Antietam Creek was purchased by Anderson in 1752, and another tract in Path Valley, also purchased by Anderson, the bill of sale dated 1753. The whole sum realized from the three tracts was £ 20 and some shillings. The inference is, from the following quotation from the writ, that Anderson had made over to Kidd the "rents and profits" of the lands in payment of the debt: "The rents and profits failed to pay the debt and interest, etc.". Deed Book "A2", page 118. William Anderson, therefore, is shown to have left Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, before the autumn of 1761. The tax lists of that county, from 1753 to 1762, are lost, so the year he ceased to be assessed in it it is impossible to tell, nor whether he went direct to South Carolina, not stopping for a time in either Virginia or North Carolina. What I have given in these papers contains all the facts, which a protracted and careful search has brought to light. As with the Dennys, none of the Andersons of the present day have any more authentic records of their families than are found in this, Cumberland County, and not further back than one or two generations in many cases. There were so many settlers of the same name and their descendants cannot tell to which line they belong. None of William and Rebecca (Denny) Anderson's family remained in Cumberland County, so none of their descendants are here now. There was a Samuel Anderson in Cumberland at the same time William settled here in 1747. Samuel Anderson was a captain of an associated regiment, "West End Lancaster County, over the River Susquehanna." I give these facts concerning others of the name. They may someday be of value, or at least prevent the same ground being gone over in further search. The records of the old churches in western part of the county, indeed, of any part of this county, are very incomplete. Those that we have are of date too late to help in your search. There are no "Parish Records", such as are in Maryland and Virginia. Indian "raids" were so frequent, settlers so often driven from homes, that private records, if there were any, were not or could not have been preserved. Whether the graveyards of Chester County would reveal anything is doubtful. The inscriptions on the stones of many of these old graveyards in the different counties have been published, but in them there are no Andersons or Dennys old enough to have been the parents of William and Rebecca. I have seen every paper and record available, and the result is herein given to you. The facts, proven, I think are: William Anderson came to America, doubtless, from Ireland. That he was then a married man is probable; that, however, may not have been. He and Rebecca may have been married in Chester County. In the list of marriages of churches accessible—very many of the oldest are—their marriage is not recorded. William Anderson left Chester County, removed to Cumberland; name on first tax list of that county; a William Anderson took up land in Lancaster County in 1745; was probably the Chester County man. It is proven by a deed, Book "A2", page 118, that he, with his family, left Cumberland County before the autumn of 1761.

DENNY FAMILY—PENNSYLVANIA

(From the Anderson-Denny History)

The name is not found in the very early records of Pennsylvania, i. e., before 1700, or the earliest years of that century, none of the name in lists of warrants of land in "Old Rights, of Philadelphia, Bucks or Chester counties," nor have I found the name in any records of Maryland, nor in lists of wills or administrations of the early years of New Jersey, which are published in archives of that State. This appears confirmation of the statement of the Chester County historians, that the Dennys, who are found there in 1720-21, were "original emigrants," whether from Scotland or the north of Ireland, it is impossible for me to say; there are not the full lists of ships and emigrants from Great Britain, such as are of German emigrants. There are in Bucks County records a list of "first settlers" and Old Rights published in Pennsylvania's Archives which gives earliest warrants of land, in the three first counties of the State. viz: Philadelphia, Bucks and Chester. A search of all these records fails to show a Denny in this country to have been the father of children, born here in 1708 and 1710, as were William, of Uwchland township, and Rebecca, wife of William Anderson. There is in the "Minute Book of Property, Book H", reference to one who possibly was old enough, but there is no further reference to him, and it is certain that he is not the father of William or Rebecca. The note referred to is the following: "Meeting of Commissioners at Philadelphia, 5th mo. 25, 1713, warrant to —, for 200 acres of land in County Kent, between the lands of William Reynolds and William Denny." Who this William was, I have no way of deciding, there is no record of land taken up by him at this time or place, but settlers did not always take out patents for land at the time they located, in some cases their sons took them for the land taken up by their fathers.

So in 1737 we find the proprietors, granted "to Philip Denny a resurvey of 200 acres of land on the south side of main Duck Creek, Kent County." Whether there was any connection between William of 1713, and Philip, thirty-four years later, no record is found to show. William may never have been in America; land was purchased, or taken up, frequently, by those who themselves did not emigrate. A genealogist, of Philadelphia, who had work in Kent County, Delaware, looked up the records there for me, and found Philip Denny had no connection with the Dennys whose record we want to find. Philip had one son, Christopher, I think was his name. There is nothing in the Delaware records to show any connection with the Chester County Dennys, although it is probable that all these Dennys were related in some way. There were not many of the name in the new country. In 1756 William Denny was appointed by the Penns, Governor of Pennsylvania. The state histories and the Arcives do not give any of his personal history; he held the office a few years, there is nothing of him further; he probably returned to England. Chester County records show two brothers, Walter and William Denny, were in that county in 1721, both in Birmingham township, unmarried; Walter, a married man, in Nottingham, in 1729, later in Kennett; William, also in Nottingham, married. Chester history says these brothers left Chester and moved to Cumberland County. William did remove to Cumberland, his will dated 1750, gives his home as in Pennsboro, later East Pennsboro. He died in 1751, left a widow, Agnes (not a Parker); names "youngest son William and oldest son Walter, son-in-law John McClure. The oldest son, Walter, died in 1778 or 1779. In an Orphan's Court proceeding it is stated he was fifty years old at the time of his death; he was born, then, in 1728 or 1729. This Walter had one daughter, Mary, who married a Ramsey, and several sons; of the sons there was William, the oldest, who married Agnes, daughter of John Parker, of Cumberland County. One of their sons was Major Ebenezer Denny. This William and Agnes

Denny are the more immediate ancestors of the Dennys, of Pittsburgh, and the Murrays, of Carlisle. Other sons of Walter (son of William 1st) were John, David. Walter and Daniel. Daniel, named for one of his mother's family, it is supposed, died in this county, Cumberland, in 1834; not having children, nor naming a wife was probably never married. I do not think any of the Dennys are now in this part of the country. No doubt more of the family than William went further west, beyond Pittsburgh, doubtless. Walter Denny, the first brother of William who came to Cumberland left Chester and took up land in Lancaster County. He did not come to Cumberland County. Land warrants show he, Walter, took out patent for land, 100 acres, in Lancaster County, April 1, 1737. He died in Little Britain township, that county, in 1752; his will dated 16th March, 1752, probated 25th June, 1752; of this will and that of his widow, Margaret Denny, you have abstracts. Walter had one son, John. Walter makes bequests to "the children of sons in law", names the "sons in law", but does not name their wives, presumably his daughters; but his widow, Margery Denny, in her will, 1760, names them and their husbands, but John the "beloved son" of Walter, her husband, is not named by her. John was living, for he and Robert McQuestion, one of the sons in law, removed to Cumberland County. John was a son by a former wife, no doubt, and probably the daughter of Margery were hers by a former husband. I cannot trace the David Denny, the son in law, named in both wills. Dr. Eagle, in the note quoted by Mr. John Miller, gives the name as David Dunning. In each of these wills, recorded in Lancaster County, the name is Denny. I did not look at the original wills, but will do so when again in Lancaster; it is scarcely probable such an error has been made in copying; if so, it should be corrected in the records. I have made diligent search for David Denny, also for David Dunning, and find nothing concerning either. It appears irrelevant, but a successful search for a record of a David Denny might reveal something important concerning the family of William and Rebecca. William, of Uwchland township, and Rebecca, who married William Anderson, were brother and sister, I believe to be certain; the names of several of their children were the same, and that counts as evidence, in the days when family names were treasured as almost sacred. Robert who died in East Pennsboro was probably another brother. In his will he names grandchildren only, the children, all of them, of daughters, seemingly there were no sons. In none of the records of Cumberland County, so far as I can determine, are the names of these daughters. That these daughters were dead is shown by the property being left to their children. The Anderson grandson and granddaughter were presumably of age, for there is no application for guardian for them as there was for the others. Mr. Zemer cannot give me any authority for assertion that one of the daughters of Robert Denny was named Rebecca, and that she, Rebecca, married an Anderson. I think the coincidence of a daughter of Robert Denny, married to an Anderson, led to the assumption that the daughter was Rebecca, wife of William A., and the one whose early record you wanted. I wish the names of these daughters could be discovered; they might give evidence of relationship to the others. Statement that William 1st, who died in 1751, and Robert, who died in 1784, and John who died in West Pennsboro in 1786, were brothers, is an error. William 1st was certainly an uncle of John, who was the only son of Walter, of Little Britain, Lancaster County. John Denny died in 1786; his will dated September, 1782, probated in 1786, left a widow, Margery, one son, Walter, and several daughters, among them Jean Burns, Margery, wife of James Ferguson, Sarah Denny, Elizabeth and Ann. John Denny, Robert Denny and Robert McQuestion, are first taxed in Cumberland County, in 1753. They died within a year or two of each other. About the same time died William Denny, of Uwchland township, Chester County; also Walter, son (eldest son) of William Denny, who died in 1752. I do not know the date of death of Rebecca Denny Anderson and it will no doubt show her to have been about the age of these others, as these Dennys were the same generation. That William, of Uwchland, and Rebecca Anderson, were not born in America, is certain, in my opinion, formed after exhaustive search. There is not a paper, will, deed, or any other which shows one of the name here, who had child or children named Rebecca, William, Robert or David, born early as these years these Dennys were born. William is first found in Uwchland Township in 1735; he was possibly in this country a year or two before he "settled". About the same time William Anderson is found in Chester County; at this time William Denny was about 27 years old and Rebecca Anderson 24 or 25. There is strong probability that these parties were married when they came to America, following their older relatives, William and Walter, to Chester County. This is not simply conjecture, but deliberate opinion, formed after all the ground of research has been covered. The descendants of the Dennys living here, the Murreys and the Dennys, of Pittsburgh, know nothing of their ancestry further back than Walter, who died in 1778. If these latter have coats of arms and silver, they must have been acquired since the death of Walter, for in my search for information, I have looked at the inventories filed here, of these old Dennys, in which every article they possessed is named; there is nothing of that kind in the list. The result of my investigation is a well founded belief that William Denny, of Uwchland township, Chester County, Pennsylvania, who settled there, or was settled there in 1735, and died there in 1784, who was born in 1707 or 1708, and Rebecca Denny, born in 1710, and married William Anderson, were brother and sister. They were born in the "old country". Chester County historians say, "the Dennys were probably from Scotland". This may be, the Dennys were undoubtedly a Scottish family, but the probability is, they came as did the majority of emigrants, from the north of Ireland, earlier members of the family having been driven there from their home in Scotland. A search of marriage lists and church records of Philadelphia and Chester County, failed to reveal marriages of any of these older Dennys, i. e., William, of Uwchland, and Rebecca. The first William and Walter we know were married in this country. I do not know to whom. From their ages when first found here, William, of Uwchland, and William Anderson, could have been married men when they emigrated.

A. H. WATTS.

Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

I send with this the results of my investigation of the Anderson-Denny families. I think you will agree with me that William Anderson and Rebecca Denny, his wife, did not have an American ancestry. Every earlier settler of either name, noted in Pennsylvania records, including those of "the Lower Counties", now Delaware, has been looked up, and when I was in Maryland, lately, I investigated the early Andersons of that State. There were no Dennys there. I give in my papers every fact which the records contain concerning these ancestors of yours. It may seem very little, but it is absolutely all, and leaves us to infer that their parentage must be looked for in the old country; the only probable or possible clue to that of William Anderson is in the wills of John and Samuel Anderson, of Nottingham township, Chester County, in which in that of John in 1758, his home in Ireland, is given. Nowhere, in public or private records, have I seen any reference to where the Dennys came from except in Chester County history, that "they were supposed to have come from Scotland." In working on the other family lines we often meet with reference to or facts concerning those thought to have no connection with each other, so in search in genealogical lines aside from yours, I will have an open mind for Anderson and Denny data. I did not go into New Jersey; the Archives of that State have nothing regarding any Dennys early enough to have been the parents of Rebecca, and it seemed useless expense to make the trip. I did, however, ask a friend to look for Anderson records there. It, like all others, revealed nothing about your William. I expect to spend a couple of days in Philadelphia about the end of July, on my way to Atlantic City, where I am due the first of August. If any new old papers have been discovered and placed in the Genealogical Society collection, I will then see them, but I have no expectation of further revelations concerning William and Rebecca Anderson. That they were emigrants I accept as fact, but it is a satisfaction to know that the ground has been covered in the research. Limited as the results may appear to you, it is better to have facts than incorrect statements. When in Washington, in the Congressional Library, I looked up a few Virginia published records.

I regret the records have not given what you so much wished, the parentage and place of birth of your forbears, and that they do not add more facts to your family history. If at any time I find any item of interest to your family, I will certainly send it to you. I enclose bill for work done and expense incurred. Hoping your reunion will be a very pleasant one,

A. H. WATTS.

A MESSAGE FROM THE AUTHOR

From time to time we find particular pleasure in some line of endeavor or item of special interest in which time and effort are of little concern. While engaging in such, an additional pleasure is realized where the benefits are for others and not just for ourselves. When something we do during life has the possibility of being preserved through the years, an even greater satisfaction is evident.

This has been especially true for me during the past year in carrying out the assignment of last August, that of securing information and arranging it for a new history to set forth the descendants of James Mason Anderson "Tyger Jim" and his wife, Mary "Polly" Miller.

Never in my whole life have I undertaken anything which has offered me the pleasure and hours of enjoyment as has the job of assembling and arranging the material for this publication. I have come to know scores of my own relatives as close friends through our correspondence with each other and I have become very conscious of the interest expressed in this undertaking.

Those of us who have had in our possession a copy of the Anderson-Denny History published in 1914 have realized the extreme value of such a book. We have accordingly set about to provide those of the present and future generations with a volume which we hope will be cherished equally with Anderson-Denny. For those who have not heretofore known the history of their forebears, this new book will be a source of much enlightenment.

I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the assignment which you gave to me and in turn thank each one who has had a part in furnishing material untiringly to be used in the new book. Special effort has been made to prevent errors and omissions. Realizing the human element involved, there may be such errors or omissions; however, there is no offense intended anywhere.

I want to maintain contact through the years that follow with as many of you as possible. There will be reunions every five years and there will be trips on the part of many through various parts of the country, all of which can be utilized to keep a closer tie with our ever growing number of kin people.

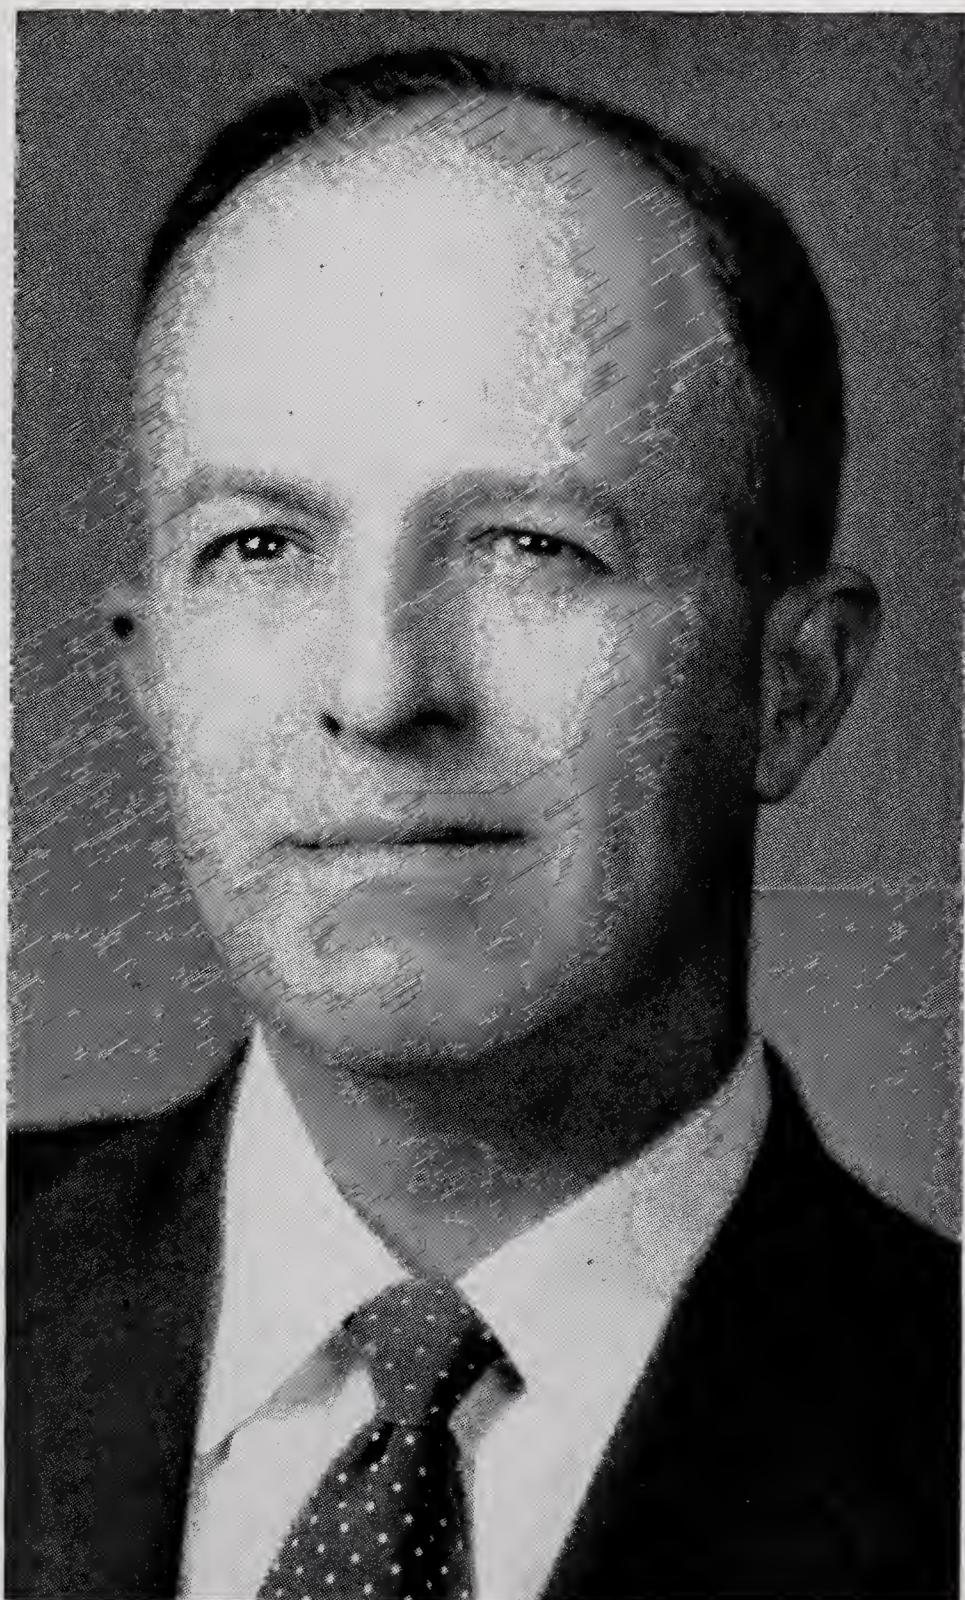

From now on I will continue to maintain as complete family records as possible. I want to add every new baby, every death, each marriage and change of address. It will mean so much to have you keep me informed of these changes and additions as the years go on.

Our goal of a new family history is now realized and accordingly the new book is commended to each one of you. It is my hope that you will read carefully those portions of it that interest you and preserve it in your family for reference during the years ahead.

Respectfully yours,

EDWARD LEE ANDERSON.
